UBCM Hears Tough Talk

KAMLOOPS—An end to increasing participation of senior governments in financing municipal services may not be clearly in sight, but it exists just the same, Municipal Affairs Minister Wesley Black said yesterday.

Mr. Black was speaking to 600 money-hungry delegates to the opening session of the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention here.

It was a tough speech to delegates who have come to the convention determined to get more provincial help, particularly in the field of education.

TAX INCREASE

Earlier, executive members of the UBCM had in hand a recommendation for an increase in the provincial sales tax from the present five per cent.

'Canada's Defence Only Harmful In Nuclear Attack'

By ED COSGROVE

Canada's non-nuclear air defence weapons would be more harmful than helpful to the population of this country in the event of an all-out nuclear attack on North America.

This startling fact was disclosed this week by the men charged with the air defence of North America to this reporter during a tour of the awe-inspiring NORAD headquarters at Ent Air Force Base, Colorado Springs.

The information was not pushed—or was it withheld—when key officials at the gigantic air defence complex were asked pointblank whether Canada's lack of nuclear warheads for defensive missiles fired by the five fighter-interceptor squadrons and two Bomarc bases endangered the continent's air defences.

STAFF ANSWERS

That question was answered in part by Col. A. L. Cox, USAF, director, threat assessment and deputy chief of staff, intelligence.

Col. J. J. Pratt, United States Army, plans officer; Lt. Col. J. L. Beck, USAF, operations officer; and Maj. F. F. Hickey, U.S. Army, operations officer at the combat operations centre.

LATER CONFIRMED

Their answers were later confirmed in an interview with the deputy commander of NORAD, Air Marshal Roy Slemmon, RCAF.

These officers say the lack of nuclear warheads in Canada's contribution to continental security means that invading bombers, even though they are "downed" by Canadian defensive forces, will be able to explode their nuclear bombs, transforming vast areas of Canada into fallout-polluted wastelands.

SIMPLE FUSES

"Dead man" fuses are standard equipment on American nuclear bombs. The fuse is a simple device which guarantees the nuclear payload aboard a bomber will be exploded in the event the bomber is shot down.

"We have no doubt the Russian bombs are similarly equipped," said one of the officers at the briefing session.

Freedomites Broke Resort to Sect Diet

GRAND FORKS, B.C. (CP)—Lack of money is forcing British Columbia's marching Sons of Freedom Doukhobors to obey the rules of their religion.

Strictly speaking, Freedomites aren't supposed to eat meat or take liquor. But in recent years, only the older members of the sect have adhered to the faith.

Now the hardships of a 400-mile trek from the British Columbia Kootenays to a Freedomite prison are bringing younger Freedomites back into the fold.

Storekeepers close to the encampment of about 300 Freedomites on a Grand Forks farm reported heavy sales of canned meat when the Sons arrived here six days ago.

One hotelman said his stock of bottled beer was sold out the night they came to town.

But Wednesday, both stores and beer parlors reported their sales had dropped back to normal, apparently because the Freedomites have run out of ready cash.

The sect blames its financial plight on a decision by welfare officials at Victoria to stop social assistance payments to the Freedomites. (See Page 21.)

Hundreds of members of the sect have been living on social welfare since their menfolk were sentenced to jail terms up to 24 years in the past year for bombings and arson.

An advance party of Freedomites has received a hostile reception from municipal officials in the Agassiz area. Lack of any prospect of a place to settle near the prison has stalled the westward trek.

B.C. Wants Britain In Market

The British Columbia government remains solidly in favor of leaving Britain free to join the European Common Market but it won't make its position officially known in London for two reasons.

B.C. Trade Minister Robert Bonner said yesterday the chief reason is that no matter how much the province desires with the federal government on the question it would not attempt to undermine federal policy in an international sphere.

SECOND REASON

The second reason is there exists no avenue of protest by which B.C. could present its views to the United Kingdom government.

"But here at home it's different," said Mr. Bonner.

He was harshly critical of any obstacles put in the way of Britain's ECU entry by Canada.

SOUGHT INDEPENDENCE

"Canada for many years sought independence of Great Britain. Having achieved independence we are now trying to impose superintendence."

Canada's present position, he said, adopts the conviction "that independence is only supposed to work one way."

Britain's entry into the European trading bloc would help stabilize Europe politically and

In Talks

LONDON (CP)—Commonwealth criticism of Britain's bid to join the Common Market piled up again Wednesday as Commonwealth prime ministers wound up the first stage of their summit conference.

Prime Minister Macmillan is expected to deliver Britain's reply Saturday after a cabinet meeting Thursday that will review the government's position.

SIGNIFICANT

Conference sources said Saturday could be a "most significant" day, but there was no indication Macmillan's government will change its determination to press on with negotiations to join Europe.

'Work For Welfare'

KAMLOOPS (CP)—Municipal businessmen called Wednesday for better farm work for unemployed men would work for their social assistance.

A report issued by the welfare committee of the Union of B.C. Municipalities said the plan would apply only to "drifters."

Delegates at the opening session of the UBCM convention were also urged to make senior governments to reduce unemployment persons who can work from social welfare rolls.

The report said these people are the responsibility of the National Employment Service.

1,000 Sons Threaten To Storm Prison

GRAND FORKS (CP)—Sons of Freedom Doukhobors threatened Wednesday to march 1,000-strong into Mountain Prison if 67 Freedomite terrorists held there are not released.

"We will enter the prison if our men are not let out," said Mrs. Penny Storgell, leader of the sect's march from the Kootenays to Agassiz in the Fraser Valley.

The prison was built near Agassiz earlier this year to hold Freedomites convicted of bombings and burnings in the Kootenays.

Mrs. Storgell, known as "Big Penny" to members of the sect, said a Freedomite delegation

Your Good Health

Let Us Not Develop Cholesterol Phobia —It's Needed in Body

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD
Dr. Joseph Molner: I am taking medication for a high cholesterol level, but nothing seems to lower it. I am on a diet. I would like to know more about cholesterol and what it means by vegetable oils and butterfat. —MRS. A. H.

You aren't the only one who would like to know more about cholesterol. So would I. So would the research experts who are struggling to unravel the facts.

This much we know: Cholesterol will be formed in the blood no matter what we eat. We need it. It's natural.

CURTAIN, USR
We strongly suspect, however, that too much cholesterol and other fatty substances may contribute to a thickening or partial clogging of our blood vessels.

We also know—with qualifications—that some foods are more readily converted to cholesterol and similar materials than others.

Therefore we think it is probably wise to curtain to some extent the excessive use of these "high cholesterol" foods.

We also have observed that regular exercise usually reduces the cholesterol level.

UNKNOWN FACTORS
Neither medication nor diet is a sure means of lowering the cholesterol level. We don't know why. Obviously there are factors we haven't yet solved.

In view of the foregoing, the best rule for the present is simply this: Let's not any of us develop a phobia over cholesterol. Let's not be afraid of cholesterol, which is a useful and necessary material in our bodies. Let's go a bit easier on the "high cholesterol" foods, and substitute those which are lower.

This is not as difficult as it perhaps sounds. We are talking about fats for the most part, or "fatty acids."

EASY RULE:
The "saturated" fatty acids appear to be the culprits. These are, generally speaking, animal fats.

Cut down on these, and substitute what we call the "polyunsaturated" fatty acids. These, in general, are fish oils and vegetable oils, corn oil being a common one and safflower oil a more palatable one.

The easy rule, accurate enough for our purposes, is to cut down on fats which are solid at room temperature, and substitute fats for oils which are liquid at room temperature.

Dear Dr. Molner: What would cause a cyst of the gland in the lower eyelid? —A.D.W.

It's called a chalazion. One of the little glands becomes clogged—and the result is a cyst. That is the material secreted no longer can get out, so the gland swells.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is the cause of color blindness and can it ever be cured? My son is color blind. —MRS. C.O.

The cause is unknown, and nothing can be done about it. Fortunately most color blind people can distinguish between colors by the varying intensities of "greenness" in them.

'Canada's Defence Only Harmful'

A conventional high explosive warhead might down a bomber—but leave the bomb intact and deadly, ready to explode at a preset altitude ranging from zero to 1,000 feet.

The fireball would have all the material needed to spread a deadly mantle of radioactive fallout.

'COOKED' BOMB

Nuclear warheads in rockets and missiles of defending U.S. aircraft are able to "cook" a nuclear bomb, rendering it a dud.

This, say NORAD experts, is not opinion. It is fact.

There is no way known to them to "booby-trap" a nuclear bomb whereby it could be triggered by an air-to-air nuclear "pipsqueak" carried by defending aircraft.

TRIVIAL FALLOUT

The atomic blast of these "pipsqueak" missiles would produce only a trivial fallout, according to expert opinion.

The "weapon kill" system, whereby a missile or rocket can destroy a bomber and neutralize its fissionable payload, is not a new revelation.

VITAL DIFFERENCE

This vital difference between nuclear versus high explosive warheads was made public in a speech to the Canadian International Air Show at Toronto Sept. 1 last year by NORAD commander-in-chief Gen. Lawrence Kuter.

But, say NORAD public information officers who attended the banquet, the point seemed to be lost on Canadian newsmen who were present.

"I was certain this would be the one thing they would pay particular attention to," said a Canadian squadron leader. "Yet not a pencil moved at the press table."

STRONG URGING

Gen. Kuter's reference to the "weapons kill" system was made at the strong urging of Canadian members of the NORAD team.

And the lack of publicity afforded the "weapons kill" portion of the speech puzzled Americans and frustrated Canadian NORAD members.

FAILED TO REGISTER
(Actually, the story was reported, but the military opinion is it failed to "register" with the Canadian public.)

The Canadians at Colorado Springs find a sharp divergence between the American and Canadian press approach to defence matters.

NEED AMMUNITION
Canadian newsmen, they say, tend to seek ammunition for battles on the political front, while American reporters deal with the matter of national defence.

Public information officer, Sqdn. Ldr. Lloyd Morrison, said he has been hard-pressed at times to answer the highly technical questions posed by "defence experts" employed on all of the major, and many minor, American newspapers.

BEING WASTED

Defence matters are removed from the political realm in that the only political overtones in such stories is whether the national defence budget is being wasted.

American officers are thoroughly briefed on press relations and their dictum, explained by the senior PIO at Colorado Springs (an army artillery colonel) is: "Give them all the information, and as soon as possible."

MORE INFORMED

Canadian officers at the Colorado Springs base believe the average American to be vastly more informed on defence subjects than his Canadian brother.

One popular misconception constantly appearing is that NORAD commanders, Gen. John Gerhart, USAF, who replaced Gen. Kuter, and his deputy, Air Marshal Roy Slemmon, can press the button that launches the massive retaliation embodied in the Strategic Air Command in the event of an attack.

"NORAD can't start the war," said Maj. Hickey, following a demonstration of the complex combat operations centre.

But while Strategic Air Command must consult the U.S. president and the Canadian prime minister before launching its missiles and bombers, NORAD is under no such obligation.

AUTHORITY GIVEN

The authority has been delegated to Gen. Gerhart and his deputy, Air Marshal Slemmon, to defend North America. NORAD's arsenal of weapons are on five-minute call to do just that. What NORAD commanders stress is that their command is a defensive one.

NORAD intelligence and follow-up actions are passed on to the SAC Combat Operations Centre. But SAC has its own intelligence and warning system. This plus evaluation of NORAD information, is what determines whether SAC bombers and missiles are launched.

The failure of the vast majority of Canadians to understand this fundamental difference is due, NORAD press officers claim, to the lack of "objective" reporting in Canadian publications.

They fear the Canadian public is "apathetic" to the problems of North America's aerospace defence.

173 CANADIANS

They back their claim with figures showing the number of persons who visited the NORAD base last year. Of the 24,000 people who toured the installation at Colorado Springs, only 173 were Canadians.

ONLY TAKEN

Another misconception that bothers Canadian officers is that Canada's participation in NORAD is only token.

"The impact of responsibility on Canadian officers and men... is out of all proportion to our country's contribution," said one senior officer.

Britain Has Trade Tiger by Tail

By ALAN HARVEY

Canadian Press Staff Writer
Britain has a tiger by the tail. This is becoming clearer every day as the nation that gave birth to the Commonwealth concept glumly listens to her maturing offspring unite in criticism of the new design for Europe.

Under glittering crystal chandeliers at Marlborough House, the leaders of Canada and Australia, India and Pakistan, Ghana and New Zealand, are making their anxieties felt in a restrained but striking fashion.

They all say, in effect, that they know they cannot veto Britain's entry into Europe—in the long run President de Gaulle of France may have the last word—but that they are deeply worried about what may happen to the Commonwealth.

It is a tricky moment for Prime Minister Macmillan. Instinctively, he shrank away from a final decision on Europe. He spent months in gloomy indecision. Finally, he convinced himself that European membership is not only compatible with the Commonwealth, but is part of the logic of history.

Two world wars, in the first He feels these conflicts origin- help in hastening the new unity. Along with other European-minded Englishmen, he prob-

Common Dollar for West Europe?

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A high treasury official hinted Wednesday at the possibility of a single western European currency linked to the U.S. dollar.

Under Secretary Robert Roosa alluded to this in an analysis of present international monetary arrangements, which are built around the U.S. dollar and its relation to gold.

Roosa's analysis, published by the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, was the most comprehensive statement of U.S. thinking on the subject yet made by any official of the Kennedy administration. In effect, it was a government white paper.

ly considers the United Kingdom can supply a missing vitamin for the brawling, booming continent. Europe is a fascinating mosaic of tongues, cultures and customs and it has a genius all its own, but maybe it could use a little British "fair play," a smattering of old Albion's tolerance, stability and flair for compromise.

So Macmillan took the leap—and now he is pretty well politically committed as Commonwealth and domestic pressures mount against him. The prime minister is devoted to the Commonwealth, and the implications that he is guilty of leaving it in the lurch must be galling.

Pressure is also intense on the home political front.

Until recently, responsible opinion largely discounted internal opposition to the Common Market idea.

Lately, the opposition seems to be becoming more widespread. Labor Party Leader Hugh Gaitskill is swinging toward a more openly disapproving policy, and there are rumblings about a general election.

The situation seems a difficult one. Macmillan's strategy probably will be to bide his time and play for the best bounce of the ball when negotiations resume at Brussels in a few weeks.

Cubans Pledge Bigger Raids

MIAMI (UPI)—Emboldened Cuban exiles operating from secret Caribbean bases pledged "more and bigger" attacks on "beilgevent" shipping in Cuba's sea lanes yesterday as Havana radio blared new defiance at U.S. "warmakers."

Repercussions from Monday's sea attack on a port on Cuba's north coast, in which three ships including a British freighter were hit, ranged thousands of miles from Cuba's shores.

Guatemala said it would demand the hemisphere's foreign ministers take action against the Castro regime under terms of the Rio de Janeiro mutual defence treaty. This provides for punitive measures ranging from an economic blockade to armed action.

The Communist daily Hoy in Havana said editorially in an extra edition that the Russian warning had "calmed down the hysteria of the U.S. warmakers."

In Managua, the Nicaraguan airline said it was re-routing its daily flights to Miami because of harassment by Soviet-built Cuban MIG fighters.

Miami spokesmen for the "Alpha 68" Cuban exile group which said it staged Monday's daring raid on Caribbean said Soviet and Soviet chartered ships carrying men and material to Cuba would be attacked.

WASHINGTON (AP)—State Secretary Rusk said Wednesday the U.S. administration would not tolerate having Cuba become a base for offensive action against the United States or any Western hemisphere country.

Papers Launch Funds For Burned Churches

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Newspaper fund campaigns were under way Wednesday in the North and South to reconstruct two Negro churches burned in south Georgia last Sunday.

FBI agents meanwhile pursued an inquiry into the burning of the Mt. Olive Baptist Church in Sasser and the Mt. Mary Baptist Church in a nearby community. The Mt. Olive church had been active in Negro voter registration work and both churches were connected with desegregation activities.

The Atlanta Constitution announced Tuesday it was starting a church fund to rebuild the structures. Contributions were reported coming in steadily with $800 in the fund Wednesday.

Senators Sorry For Steel

WASHINGTON (AP)—A steel industry spokesman told senators Wednesday the U.S. industry is in trouble competitively, and said its difficulties would be compounded by forced disclosure of production cost data.

BUNGLED OUT? Thomas F. Patton, president of Republic Steel, spoke for the industry before the Senate judiciary committee, which is considering whether to support a contempt of Congress move against executives of four firms which refused to supply the data.

He got a sympathetic response from several of the senators, who suggested the steel industry is being singled out unfairly and questioned whether any legislative purpose could be served by producing figures which might help the steelmakers' competitors.

But Senator Estes Kefauver insisted that the figures are needed in relation to various measures his anti-trust subcommittee is considering.

Price-Fix Claimed On Tubes

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—A special federal grand jury Wednesday indicted 11 corporations and seven individuals on charges of conspiring to fix and stabilize prices in the sale of copper and brass tubes and pipes throughout the United States from 1956 to 1961.

The defendant corporations, whose sales of tube and pipe from 1956-60 amounted to about $1,800,000,000, were charged with holding meetings in a private club and in private homes of hotels to achieve collusive price agreements.

False Emphasis

THE news dispatches from London about the prime ministers' conference suggest that the overseas Commonwealth premiers are ganging up on Britain against the Common Market. One newspaper puts its story in a headline saying Mr. Diefenbaker launches their "full fury" against the ECM.

Responsible London dailies report the conference in a much more objective and balanced tone. Far from "attacking" Britain the visiting prime ministers show their anxiety lest their countries be harmed by Britain's entry but they acknowledge Britain's right to make its own final decision.

What they are seeking is the retention of the Commonwealth as a political and economic structure of value and this, they fear, might be weakened and disrupted by a merger between Britain and the European Six.

There is no question of ganging-up or declaring war on Mr. Macmillan, but they take the opportunity of a family gathering to speak freely and frankly on a subject of immense gravity to all the Commonwealth members.

It is a false emphasis that would depict Mr. Diefenbaker or any of the other premiers as being discourteous or inconsiderate of Britain's own problems. The London conference is not a belligerent session of the United Nations. It is a gathering of friends, even if they happen to hold divergent views.

Another current dispatch should help to correct the perspective, that which reports 32 British trade unions, representing a membership of more than 2,000,000, as requesting a general election in Britain on the Common Market issue.

Many besides the overseas Commonwealth premiers, it will thus be noted, are apprehensive lest Britain's entry into the ECM should prove to be a mistake. A growing sentiment in Britain seems to favor the attitudes voiced by the overseas prime ministers as they discuss this vitally important matter.

Reaping the Profits

THE cigarette scare induced many people to give up smoking; the government would be in a hole if any similar reaction hit its liquor trading.

The government is in the liquor business because this is the best way to keep control of a commodity which if used unwisely can bring harm to its consumers. It makes a feeble gesture towards educating people to the virtue of moderation or even total abstinence but gladly reaps in the profits from its sales.

The prices it charges can, of course, be construed as one means of keeping sales down, although one is not sure this is the philosophy uppermost in mind. Liquor Board revenues are a bonanza.

There are few commodities that return a straight profit of 40 per cent, which is about the size of the gain made from Liquor Board operations last year. An overall profit of nearly $30,000,000 in a turnover of $103,000,000 is a whopper that must tickle the heart of the provincial treasurer.

Consumers could well be excused for thinking they are badly overcharged for the beer, wines and spirits they buy, but theirs is not a case that wins much sympathy. They are vulnerable to the argument that if they don't like the price they can stop the purchase.

They contribute mightily to provincial revenues, nonetheless, even if they get no credit for their habits of consumption. Taxes would take a sharp jump in other directions were the liquor stores to shut down for lack of business.

Fools in the Woods

AS USUAL at this time of year, safety authorities are calling attention anew to the need for common-sense caution among hunters.

The National Safety League of Canada says that foolish acts are the ones that really cause accidents. They can all be prevented, the league says, if hunters will follow ten simple rules:

Treat every gun as if it is loaded; never point a gun at anything you do not intend to shoot; be sure of your target before you shoot; before firing be sure barrel and action are clear and unobstructed and that you are using the proper size of ammunition; keep the safety on until you are ready to shoot and carry the gun so it will not point at anyone should you stumble; unload your gun before climbing a fence or tree or travelling in a car or boat; never shoot a bullet at a flat surface or at water; don't mix gunpowder and alcohol; before carrying a gun into camp, unload it and leave action open; be sure guns at home are empty and that ammunition and weapons are stored separately, away from children.

It is difficult indeed to visualize an accident happening if all these rules were followed by all nimrods. But as usual, they won't be. The regular toll of deaths and injuries can be expected.

Demonstrated year after year is the woeful fact that appealing to the good sense of hunters with rules like these is not enough—no more than it would be enough merely to remind car drivers from time to time of the dangers of speeding and inattention and mixing alcohol with gasoline.

Sooner or later, and the sooner the better, those who go into the wilds with guns must be made subject to the same kind of safety laws and examination as drivers, applied with the same zeal. Even then, there will still be fools in the woods. But they may be fewer.

Doris and Charles

THE shades of the novelist himself may turn in unease but presumably if anyone dare venture to "rewrite" him the great-granddaughter of Charles Dickens can claim a family prerogative.

We shall hear next, perhaps, that someone is going to rewrite Shakespeare.

School teacher Doris Dickens says she just reads a chapter and then visualizes the reader, then "I rewrite it very carefully." It all seems so simple.

The result may suit an age with no time for the "diffuseness" she finds in her great-grandfather's writings, but it will not be Dickens. The charm of a great novelist is in himself, not his descendants. Nor, one suspects, will she come near to rivaling her illustrious forebear. Charles can rest in peace.

Thinking Aloud

"... of -hess, and -hess, and -hess..."

By TOM TAYLOR

I have never known of course what the Walrus would think if he read the sub-title of this column, which for long has co-opted to its use the story Tweedledee told Alice. Pure piracy, except that the Walrus himself is so well-known the credit line, even if unprinted, is indubitably his.

Only the Walrus could, in any case, jump shoes, ships, sealings-was, cabbages and kings together as a symbol of a loose-end talk to borrow momentarily the caption under which another journalist serves his potpourri.

The fact, as doubtless you are aware, is that this daily causerie does not embrace, not often anyway, the whole gamut prescribed by the Walrus for conversational convenience.

Sometimes it talks of ships, 'tis true, but seldom if at all about sealings or shoes. The cabbages and kings were excused from titular favor some time ago, although they linger yet in the minds of some of the writer's friends, primarily I suppose because yours truly is not overfond of cabbage and his knowledge of kings is purely vicarious. Ten feet is the closest he has ever been to one and this lone occasion was of distinctly silent nature.

That does not inhibit him from essaying boldly if not always wisely on the subject of monarchy, or indeed on any other subject his fancy might light on. The Walrus, you see, was happily inviting a discussion on all manner of topics "Many things" was how he put it.

I am induced to reflection in this vein by a telephone call a few moments ago from a reader, a fairly friendly one by his tone even if he would dismiss the Walrus and start me off on a fresh footing. He suggests, for example, that I should change the pattern by giving this column a new subtitle. To tell the truth he is tired of the Walrus although not, I gather with some comfort, of what comes after him.

At any rate he offers this quotation from Sir Walter Scott: "O, what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive."

Now the impact of this morning talk, dare I use it, would set me trembling. A tangled web this column may weave at times, but a man can hardly be expected to proclaim openly that he's bent on deceit. Even the great Sir Walter, coining this phrase for poetic purpose, did not precede his historical romances with such a confession.

My reader would mean this little bit of philosophy to be of general application, no doubt, and not an admission of the columnist's intent. But I must say no. It's too risky.

The Walrus could nevertheless be invoked in other guise. He did not stop at shoes... (right down to)... kings. He went on to suggest that other diverting topics might be "why the sea is boiling hot" or "whether pigs have wings." I don't know however that I could cotton closely to either a boiling sea or a herd of hogs, even if I am not exactly a fair-weather sailor and am not averse to bacon for breakfast. Either might put "Thinking Aloud" in somewhat peculiar light, I'm afraid.

I could of course thank the Walrus for allowing me to poach on his preserves and bid him final adieu but I have a feeling this would leave me bereft. It is too profound an assumption to claim to be thinking aloud without some modifier that provides excuse for levity, whims, odd notions and, indeed, the variety the Walrus himself had in mind, obviously, when he gave this column a prelude to excuse its diversity.

But what do you think, dear reader; should I ditch him?

Migrating Multitudes

New Countries for Fifty Million

By Special OFNS Correspondent

FIFTY million people have found homes in new lands since the end of the Second World War.

Many were victims of the war itself and of subsequent wars in the Middle East, Korea, China and Indo-China, and of struggles for independence in India and Pakistan, Indonesia and North Africa. Some fled before vast social changes, and some were just ordinary emigrants seeking work and a better life.

Altogether a million people have returned to France from Algeria, Tunisia, Morocco and Guinea since 1954, as these various territories won their independence from the French. Of the 52 million people in West Germany, about 12 million have gone to live there since 1945. Some 13 million Germans or people of German origin who lived in the eastern and central parts of Hitler's Third Reich or in former German-populated areas of eastern and Central Europe, fled or were expelled to the west of Germany and to Austria, when the Soviet armies entered the war in the east with the conquest of Berlin.

The four Allied occupied zones of the reduced postwar Germany. Those in the western zones have been absorbed in the booming economy of the Federal Republic.

The 2,500,000 or more East Germans who have fled from Communism include, of course, large numbers who in other circumstances would be described as emigrants seeking a better life elsewhere. They have left in spite of intense Communist propaganda urging them to stay and help to build a better East Germany.

But hundreds of thousands of these East Germans, plus thousands of native West Germans have left Federal Germany to emigrate to the United States, Canada, Australia and elsewhere.

The United States has accepted an estimated 3,500,000 emigrants, mostly European, since 1945. Canada has given a home to more than two million (almost one in nine of her population) while more than 1,700,000 emigrants have entered Australia, including some 700,000 British.

An estimated 1,750,000 Britons have emigrated to the Commonwealth since 1945, two-thirds of them to Australia and Canada. Thousands have returned to Britain because of failure to settle in their new homes, but the overwhelming mass have been absorbed in the Commonwealth economies.

Britain herself has given a home to several hundred thousand East European refugees since the end of the war. In addition, 250,000 West Indians and 130,000 Indians and Pakistanis 30,000 other "coloured" workers, 50,000 Cypriots and Maltese and some 350,000 Irish men and women have found work in Britain to date. An estimated 100,000 Australians, Canadians, New Zealanders, South Africans and other "white" Commonwealth citizens have also come to work in Britain in the past 17 years.

Italy is the greatest "exporter" of emigrants among western countries. Well over two million Italians have left their homes since 1945 to make new lives mainly in North and South America and France. Another half a million found work in West Germany, Switzerland and other West European States to meet acute labor shortages in these countries.

Latin America has absorbed about three million postwar emigrants, mostly Italian, Spanish and Portuguese. The total also includes more than 100,000 refugees from Europe. Argentina, Brazil and Venezuela have taken the bulk of the emigrants.

But the biggest postwar population movement resulted from independence in the Indian sub-continent, and the creation of India and Pakistan. Under an immense exchange of populations, often made in conditions of appalling misery, some 8,000,000 Hindus left the mainly Muslim areas of what became Pakistan to go to India, while 7,500,000 Muslims migrated to

Report from Ottawa

It Fell Short

By ARTHUR BLAKELY

A RECENT despatch from Washington must have made nostalgic reading for many Canadians who came across it.

The despatch revealed that "there is a new gap in North American air defence."

It added: "Ironically enough, it's a gap that might have been filled by the CF-105 Avro Arrow interceptor, had the Canadian-designed aircraft not been cancelled by Ottawa..."

How so? Well, the despatch quotes General Lawrence Kuter, retired commanding officer of NORAD, as saying that Russian bombers are now capable of staying beyond the range of present NORAD interceptors and firing air-to-surface missiles at Canadian and American cities from a safe distance.

The general had urged, in a recent article, that NORAD adopt a long-range, all-weather fighter capable of flying into the northern reaches of Canada to deal with this threat.

"I know," Gen. Kuter was quoted as having written, "that it is now within the state of the art to produce a manned interceptor with an operating radius of 1,000 to 1,500 miles, ability to loiter or patrol for several hours, carry its own detection, tracking and fire-control system, operate from the deck to extremely high altitudes, and fly at better than Mach 3."

All of which caused the author of the despatch to slight: "His (Gen. Kuter's) description of the plane needed to fill the new hole in North American defence resembles the characteristics of the abandoned."

This must be read against the plain, hard fact that in 1957-58, the U.S. refused to buy the Arrow. And Ottawa, having failed to find other buyers elsewhere in the western alliance, cancelled the whole expensive project.

Does the Washington despatch mean that American experts now wish that they'd thought twice before refusing to place an order for the CF-105? Not quite. It was written by a Canadian correspondent writing for Canadian consumption.

The Americans as far as is known, are still convinced that they were right in declining (with thanks and polite regret) an urgent invitation to buy the ill-fated Arrow.

Did the U.S., then, deliberately refuse to buy an aircraft having all or many of the characteristics of Gen. Kuter's dream aircraft? Not quite.

On the basis of information that has been available here ever since the project was cancelled, the Arrow, promising as it was in many respects, would have been of little more use than the old Spitfire (and for plugging "the new gap in North American air defence.")

It was designed to meet a requirement for a supersonic, all-weather, long-range interceptor. The Arrow was supersonic, all right. But Mach 3 performance? Long range? All-weather? As far as can be learned here, the Arrow at no time displayed the characteristics of a long-range, all-weather fighter capable of meeting hostile bombers deep in the Arctic. And it was precisely this failure to meet outlined requirements that, along with extraordinary high cost, led to the abandonment of the Arrow after other NATO nations refused to buy.

The Arrow, unfortunately, didn't have an operating radius of 1,500 miles. Or of 1,000, for that matter. It couldn't "loiter," or "patrol for several hours" in a given area, as Gen. Kuter's dream-fighter would be able to do. The Arrow was fast. It would have been, presumably, a deadly foe for hostile bombers within its reach. But its reach was disappointingly limited.

Former Defence Minister George J. Peckham, VC, dealt with the point in some detail in the Canadian House of Commons on Feb. 23, 1959.

He reviewed the Canadian government's determined, even desperate, efforts to sell the Arrow to Britain and the United States during 1958.

In his comprehensive report, he had this to say:

"There was some concern at that time about the range of the CF-105. We had been informed then that the range was 238 nautical miles flying supersonically and 247 miles flying subsonically. Of course, obviously, if you are going in to an attack, you would cruise as far as you could and only go into your supersonic speed at the last few minutes, so you might say that the general operational range of the CF-105 at that time would have been about 300 miles, including some period of operating supersonically and some period of operating subsonically."

It was this stark fact which had, understandably enough, given rise to serious concern about the "limited range of this aircraft."

Prior to cancellation, a determined effort was made to increase the range of the Arrow, as well as to cut costs. Some useful results were achieved in both respects.

General Peckham, a conscientious defence minister, tucked the revised figures into his report to the Commons.

"I must add," he said, "that with the introduction of the Hughes Falcon system we have been advised by the company that additional fuel tanks can be added which would give an increased range in the CF-105... up to 324 miles supersonically and a subsonic range of 366 miles."

It wasn't enough. This failure to meet air force requirements, coupled with continuing high costs, led to the final and painful decision to abandon a promising Canadian aircraft which didn't quite fill the bill.

The Backpack

By GREGORY CLARK

WHEN you consider what a chance we had to make this world the poets, artists, philosophers dreamed for us, it is sad to contemplate the national backpack trap we have come up with. It is not a thousand years but 2,300 years since Plato, Aristotle and the Greeks set forth in plain language the elements of beauty and truth towards which all men could, easily and naturally aspire.

Century after century, ever since, poets, painters, sculptors, musicians, architects, philosophers, teachers, have presented us with a vast treasury of beauty, insight and vision. A wonderful procession of them, from all nations and in all languages.

How, then, could we, in what we call the twentieth century, but which is actually the twentieth or thirtieth century, counting back to the Egyptian and other ancient civilizations in which man started to aspire, how then could we be guilty of staging two of the most brutal wars of all time, and now find ourselves sitting, in a sort of blank stupor, on top of a backpack trap of billions of tons of dynamite?

Tiny Atoll Signals Warning to Humanity

By TOM MARGERISON

IT is eight years since the desolate collection of coral islands and atolls which form the Pacific archipelago of Bikini were shattered by the biggest explosion that had ever been produced by man.

The bomb was the equivalent of a mountain of TNT, a cube 800 feet high containing 20,000 tons of high explosive.

One of the coral atolls disappeared in a puff of smoke, vaporized into the mushroom cloud.

A trail of radioactive ash dusted the Pacific, sprinkling the Japanese fishing boat "Lucky Dragon" and part of the Marshall Island 200 miles to the south.

Eleven months later the United States Atomic Energy Commission admitted that the bomb had produced far more fallout than any which had preceded it. The Bikini blast still holds its unenviable record as the "dirtiest" ever.

But what has become of Bikini, the first corner of the earth to feel the aftermath of a hydrogen bomb?

A team of Italian film-makers recently landed on the atolls to record, unofficially, how nature coped with this particular emergency.

The coral islands have never been rich in wildlife. Most of the animals on the islets close to the explosion were probably killed by the explosion itself or by the liberal dose of radioactivity from the local showers of ash and debris.

But when the photographers landed all seemed normal. Crowds of sea-birds wheeled and squawked around them. Great lumbering sea-turtles patiently strode across the beaches.

Yet this apparently normal scene hid tragedy. The islands were covered with eggs laid so closely together that it was impossible to walk without treading on them. Most were the scarlet-yoked eggs of the sooty tern.

The birds tended them, rolled them into piles, and waited for them to hatch—but almost every one was sterile.

The vast accumulation of eggs represented several years' laying by the birds, which, although they migrate each year, return again to nest on the Bikini islands.

Probably the birds themselves have been rendered sterile by nesting on the islands while they still retained a heavy blanket of radio-active dust.

The eggs of healthy birds which decide to nest on the island may also be affected by the remnants of the radioactive ash, for eggs are particularly susceptible to radioactivity.

But by now the radio-activity will have declined so much that the egg is more likely to be damaged than to be killed, producing misshapen bird "monsters".

Nature has its own way of dealing with these freaks. Usually they are at such a disadvantage compared with the normal animals that they quickly die out.

This is what is happening to some of the Bikini sea-turtles. The Italians were amazed to find dead and dying sea-turtles right in the interior of the islands.

The normal inherited egg-laying behavior of the sea-turtle is for the female to creep ashore at night, dig a deep hole, lay her eggs in it and return to the sea before daybreak, while the male remains in the sea.

At Bikini the pattern has changed. The females come ashore to lay their eggs, but never return to the sea. Instead, they turn their backs on it and pace slowly into the desert interior where the tropical sun kills them within a few days.

And the male follows the same strange pattern; he too, now leaves the sea to commit suicide in the hot sandy interior.

The change is probably the result of damage caused to eggs laid a few years ago when the beaches were radio-active, but not sufficiently so to kill the developing turtles within the eggs.

The mother would not be rendered sterile by the radio-active ash as the sooty terns have been, simply because she does not spend enough time with the eggs after she has deposited them in the sand.

Any traces of radio-active dust she carried with her would be washed away by the sea. But the sea-turtles of Bikini are doomed just like the sooty terns.

In due course, life will return to Bikini. Healthy wanderers will recolonize the islands and the last traces of the animals without hope which linger there today will disappear. But the warning is clear.

The real tragedy of a nuclear war lies with the survivors, not with those which are killed by the first blast.

U. S. Gets to Know Talkative Caouette

By B. T. RICHARDSON From Washington

The new Canadian name for the American reader is Real Caouette. He's become a featured news item as the Quebec Creditist who controls 26 seats in the new House of Commons at Ottawa.

Since there's no likelihood that Mr. Caouette will stop talking for publication, he must be regarded as the chief agency at present in spreading the Canadian image around darkest America.

True, he's identified with French Canada, but it's remembered that his Creditism is the official doctrine of Alberta and British Columbia.

Since the supply of eccentric politicians never runs dry in U.S. politics, Real Caouette is a public figure that Americans understand by instinct. He's doing for Canada what Huey Long did for Louisiana and Joe McCarthy did for Wisconsin.

When Real Caouette proclaims "You want money, vote Social Credit," he's harping on the desire for money which is a foundation of American demagoguery.

When he promises $100 a month, Americans may shrug, but they remember fringe politicians of their own who tried a similar formula.

When Caouette promises to abolish taxes and suppress the national debt, he's sure of getting a second look from many Congressmen who know doubtless when they hear it but always want to know how he proposes to do it.

When Caouette organizes his huge, local committees that put badges on every willing soul in sight, he gets marks for basic political technique. After all, money money money and talk talk talk are the ingredients of popular politics everywhere.

The shock of American recognition of Real Caouette today is due in part to the rise of new dogmas on the extreme right of American politics, about which the liberals are making some of the same mistakes as in the 1930s.

Simple Murder Grisly Complex

1862—Birth of a City

By J. T. JONES

It looked like a simple tragedy—a nervous man shooting what he thought was an enemy but turned out to be a friend. But the Kane Street homicide blossomed into one of the juiciest crimes in Victoria's history.

George Lawrence was a little man, about five-foot-four, but quick with a pistol. James Webster was a prosperous Yates Street shoe merchant, a good friend of Lawrence, and as it turned out, a woe with the ladies while he lasted. Catty—first name uncertain—was the husband of Lawrence's sister-in-law, a relationship never exactly explained at the time. Thomas Odell and his wife were neighbors.

When Lawrence marched home to his little two-room cottage on Kane Street shortly before 9 p.m. Sept. 15, 1862, he was slightly the worse for drink. He was also tired, having just arrived from the mainland, and he carried a five-shot revolver in his waistband.

MICHAEL SHEEHAN
... hierarchy rapped

He Shot Shadow

When he heard the sound of a window being raised at the rear of his house, and saw a shadowy man standing beneath it, he thought it was Catty, and he shot him. Twice. Once through the stomach and once through the shoulder. Why should he think it was Catty—whom he had just seen up at Williams Lake—and why did he shoot? Well, at their last meeting Catty had beaten the tar out of him—and would have killed him if he hadn't been stopped. Why? Well, Lawrence had been travelling with Catty's wife

Denied the Deed

Lawrence had at first denied having done the deed. In fact Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Odell, who were together in the house at the time, both told police that Mr. Odell was the culprit. He'd threatened to do it often enough. So the plot began to thicken. Webster, it developed, wasn't there to see his old friend Lawrence, he was there to see his old friend Mrs. Odell. And, it was hinted at least once, his old friend Mrs. Lawrence.

Mary Elizabeth Odell, by the

Two Go-Betweens

One thing that was established: both Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence had been go-betweens for Webster and Elizabeth Odell, and were well rewarded for it. Webster had financed Lawrence's trip to the Interior, and the family never had to pay full price for shoes.

Did Lawrence know that his wife and Mrs. Odell more than once stayed long after closing in Webster's store? He knew after the inquest.

Right after the inquest Mrs. Odell ran off to San Francisco. For the next couple of weeks, Odell drank fairly steadily, and once tried to assault Morris Mayers, one of his wife's paramours. He got beaten senseless without leaving a mark on Mayers.

Eventually, after a bout of delirium tremens, he became a bootlegger and was arrested several times for selling liquor to Indians.

Lawrence, charged with murder (although the coroner's jury had suggested manslaughter) was found guilty of manslaughter the following January and sentenced to three years at hard labor. Even the mayor got up in court to say what a fine fellow he had always been.

Food Faddists' Fears Could Ruin Farmers

BANFF (CP)—Food faddists impede the progress of agriculture by "deliberately fomenting fear and alarm among consumers," a Montreal scientist said Wednesday.

Dr. Robert White-Stevens of Cyanamid of Canada Ltd., said attacks on the use of chemicals in food production have created an atmosphere which has made possible legislation that could reduce farm progress to "a veritable sham."

"In such an atmosphere, decisions of policy affecting the livelihoods of millions of people may be based not on knowledge but lack of it, and prejudice and superstition gain ascendancy over scientific truth."

If farmers in Canada and the U.S. stopped using chemicals, many crops could not be grown and the remaining food would be priced out of reach of all but the rich.

Dr. White-Stevens cited a U.S. food additives amendment in 1958 as an example of legislation which could end progress.

It is reasonable in that it prohibits the use of any cancer-inducing chemicals but it virtually precludes all new compounds from the agricultural and food markets.

Foods eaten and accepted for years and which contain "appreciable amounts" of suspect carcinogens include many fruits; capsicum in peppers; arsenic in fish shells; selenium in many cereals, fruits and vegetables and cobalt in all meats.

Some of the compounds were known to be essential for human nutrition.

During this period, he added, Leonard McLaughlin, now a vice-president of the SIU, sent signed blank cheques to Mr. Banks in Puerto Rico and the union's general funds "sank" from $183,000 to $40,000.

REPLY IN MONTREAL

The former SIU official said Mr. Banks told him during the 1957 strike against the deep-sea fleet of the Canadian National Steamships Company that he would never settle—even if a 50-per-cent pay raise was offered.

COURT LITIGATION

The CN line eventually went out of business, but its ships were sold to Cuba, a deal still under court litigation.

Mr. Sheehan said Mr. Banks was in Puerto Rico from February to June, 1960, supposedly "negotiating with Castro" for return of the CNS ships to Canadian registry.

The wife of the 57-year-old man who was fatally stabbed with a butcher knife in his home last Friday, Mrs. M. Pearce, 55, has been charged with capital murder in the case.

The coroner's jury heard evidence that Pearce was an alcoholic and was intoxicated at the time of his death.

Wife Charged Jury Unsure

VANCOUVER (CP)—Coroner Glen McDonald Wednesday adjourned an inquest into the stabbing death of Percy Pearce and ruled the death a homicide by a person or persons unknown.

Quits Council Jodoin Hits Barrier

OTTAWA (CP)—The National Productivity Council is a barrier to labor-management co-operation, President Claude Jodoin of the Canadian Labor

Congress said Wednesday in announcing his resignation from the 18-month-old body.

Its scope is too restricted to deal adequately with economic problems now causing deep concern, Mr. Jodoin said in his letter of resignation sent Tuesday to Prime Minister Diefenbaker. It capped reservations he had sounded from the start.

Mr. Jodoin repeated his call for an economic advisory council, bringing together the three levels of government, plus management, labor, agriculture and other groups.

His resignation leaves four other labor representatives on the 25-man productivity council. There are also five delegates from business and industry, five from agriculture and other primary industries, four federal government members and one other.

NEED MORE

Emphasis on productivity is not enough by itself at this stage, Mr. Jodoin said.

"We have reached the firm conclusion now that not only has the productivity council failed to meet these needs but its very existence in its present form is a serious handicap to the establishment of effective co-operation in regard to the solution of our economic problems."

Justice Minister Fleming commented that this is a time to encourage rather than downgrade the productivity council.

Liberal Leader Pearson said he understands Mr. Jodoin's position.

VIEWS of SPORT

By Red Smith

During the next fortnight there will appear in this space occasional dispatches from the muscle foundries of Floyd Patterson, who owns the heavyweight championship of the world, and Sonny Liston, who covets it. From a respectful reading of literature already published on the subject, it has been learned that the fist fight between these men on Sept. 25 is not to be regarded as a mere physical encounter.

Grave moral issues are at stake. The case, perhaps anybody expecting to comment on the event should make his position clear at the outset. Here goes, then, though it is a painful step because it demands a public confession of inadequacy:

I am not holy enough to sit in moral judgment on anyone. Others are, and they are greatly envied. This sinner is only a sports writer hoping to report with reasonable accuracy who struck John. Spiritual and sociological aspects of the affair will be left for more capable hands.

There is optimistic faith here that it will be a real good clambake which will either win for Patterson the ungrudging professional respect he has never enjoyed or remove him in favor of a better fighter. Apparently the public shares this faith, or the theatre-television people would not have guaranteed minimum revenue of $2,000,000.

Only a Gladiator

Before a man climbs into the ring, he checks his reputation for good or evil in the dressing room. On the far side of the ropes he is neither saint nor sinner, but only a gladiator. Floyd Patterson is a thoroughly decent human being. It is not possible to know him without being drawn to him. You could not—borrow a line from Joe Palmer—catch a better man if you set a bear trap in the aisle of a cathedral. But his halo will not ward off a hook to the head.

Sonny Liston is a jailbird. His disposition is not extravagantly winsome. The fact that he is a large jailbird seems to render him especially unappealing to some authorities. His jab isn't bad, though.

A question that has been asked before must be repeated: what's wrong with jailbirds in prize-fighting all of a sudden? Some pretty noble sentiments have been expressed—by Jim Farley Jr. of the New York State Athletic Commission, among others—about boxing's important role in the rehabilitation of wrongdoers. But when Liston applied for a licence to fight in New York, Farley voted no with his colleagues. Evidently rehabilitation must cease somewhere below the championship level.

There are well-meaning persons, including editors, who say a man of Liston's background and reputation should not be heavyweight champion of the world because the heavyweight champion is an idol and model for the American boy. Liston, they say, is not the sort of person the American boy should emulate.

Smarter Than Some Editors

This is a bad rap on the American boy, who is no dope. He is smarter than some well-meaning editors, which is not necessarily the ultimate accolade. He doesn't have to get wedged to the hips in the barrel before he can spot a wrong apple.

Some of us were American boys when Jack Johnson was heavyweight champion of the world. He wore fancy clothes, drove a white Mercedes-Benz, kept a saloon where the spittoons were solid gold, and lived abroad for years on the lam from a Mann Act rap.

Maybe he was our idol and our model, and certainly some of us turned out no better than we should be. It is difficult to believe, however, that old Jack was to blame for our imperfections.

Fortunately, Floyd Patterson has the gift of looking a fact in the face. When Liston won recognition as the leading contender for the title and Floyd's manager, Gus D'Amato, was setting up all sorts of vague and impossible conditions as obstacles to a championship match, Patterson said: "They're saying I'm ducking Liston. I want him."

When the New York Commission denied Liston a licence, Floyd said: "I positively will not fight anybody else. Get him for me somewhere."

After that there wasn't any trouble. Joe Tyner, of the Illinois Commission, gave off an admirable garbage about how "we believe in the rehabilitation of man," meaning, "If we can get this big one we'll grab it."

So now the match is made and the good guy and the bad guy are getting ready, and let's have a good one. May the worthier participant emerge victorious.

Mays Collapses in Dugout; Dodgers, Yanks Pull Away

San Francisco Giants lost a game in the National League pennant hunt yesterday, and may have lost Willie Mays for an indefinite period.

Harder to take than the 4-1 defeat inflicted by the still-hopeful Cincinnati Reds was the chance that Mays may have to miss a few games.

Mays blacked out after returning to the bench after the end of the third inning and was carried into the clubhouse on a stretcher.

His trouble was diagnosed as an acute case of indigestion and he was being kept under observation. Whether or not he will be kept out of action for any period could not be immediately ascertained.

Victory for the Reds, made possible by two home runs by Frank Robinson and one by Wally Post, was tempered by the possible loss of star-pitcher Joey Jay.

Jay stopped a drive from Chuck Hiller's bat with the index finger of his pitching hand in the fifth inning and was taken to hospital for X-rays. Jim Maloney came in to blank the Giants in the last four innings.

Giants protested the game, charging that Jay was making illegal pitches with a new fast-ball delivery the 21-game winner is using.

Los Angeles Dodgers barely made it at Houston, where the Colts managed to stop Maury Wills from stealing bases by not letting him get on base.

Wills had his 19-game hitting streak stopped as the Dodgers managed only three hits off Ken Johnson and Don McMahon, but one of them was Frank Howard's 27th home run. It was the only run of the game as Pete Richert, Ed Roebuck and Ron Ferraro took the shutout.

Howard went to Roebuck, his 10th in an unbeaten season.

Bickey Mantle and Whitey Ford, their two mainstays, teamed up for the New York Yankees last night to add a game to the American League leaders margin.

Ford, going all the way, won his 18th game in 23 decisions with a six-hitter and Mantle provided the difference in the 5-2 win over Cleveland with a three-run homer in the fifth inning.

Los Angeles' second place Angels were stopped, 4-1, by the fine pitching of Kansas City rookie Tony Pena while the third-place Minnesota Twins lost in 12 innings, 2-1, to Chicago White Sox.

But it was at Baltimore where the big individual performance of the evening took place.

Tom Cheney, a kicked-around right-hander who has pitched some good baseball this season despite his 6-5 record, set a major league strikeout record of 21 as Washington Senators went 16 innings to beat the Orioles, 2-1, on a home run by Bud Zipter.

Cheney went the whole 16 innings to become the first major league pitcher to strike out more than 19 men in a single game. It was only his fourth complete game of the season—and the others were all shutouts.

Off and Running Tomorrow

Here comes the grey horse, Daveland, leading field around stretch turn. Scenes like this will be repeated at Sandown Park, starting Friday with the opening of a 16-day racing meet. United Appeal will benefit from first day's proceeds.—(Harry Filion.)

Japanese Balk at Parking Tab Though

Elevator Service for Baseball Fans

By KIP COOPER
TOKYO (CNS)—Baseball fans—how would you like a season box seat complete with deep pile carpets, pastel colors, a refrigerator and your own private elevator?

You can have one in Tokyo for from $50 to $1,100. But you'll have to wait until next year. There was a sellout in with six seats. Doors can be locked and a special elevator carries customers up to the theatre-like boxes.

There is a luxurious salon and snack bar and "room service" for those who desire it. "Every gondola belongs to the person who pays for it," Nagata said. "He's free to put it in a refrigerator, carpets or anything he wants to enjoy the 100 games the seat entitles him to."

But it is clear that the seats aren't designed for the ordinary baseball fan. Most of the gondolas are bought by companies and organizations.

Urawa Sanatorium, for example, rented one gondola.

"The gondola is located in such a lonely place, the seats offer safe, isolated recreation for the patients," said a nurse. "Customers really feel they've had the plush treatment when we take them to one of these gondolas," said an official of a pharmaceutical company who charged the price off as a business expense.

Japanese expense accounts also cover geisha parties. So far none have been seen on the "gondola" circuit.

But some of the clients are complaining. They aren't concerned about $1,000 seats, they don't want to pay parking fees. Tokyoites have a complex about paying to park. The stadium can be full, but the parking lots stand near empty.

"Fifty cents to park a car? It's an outrage," say the fans.

She Sprinted For Canada

TORONTO (CP)—Mrs. Jack Marr, who represented Canada as a sprinter in the 1936 Olympics, died Monday of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mrs. Marr, the former Dot Brookshaw, ran the 100 metres and 400-metre relay.

Her husband, Jack Marr, was an international speed skater in the early 1930s when he set a world record.

Aussie Boss Predicts Loss

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—Gretel returned to the seas with a patched-up aluminum boom Wednesday but Australian spirits sagged with the zero hour fast approaching for the America's Cup showdown against defender Weatherly.

Shack Three Short

Some notes from around the hockey training camps:

Funch Imbach, coach of Toronto Maple Leafs, figures that any forward should be good for 10 goals a season. That's why he finds it hard to satisfy the salary demands of Eddie Shack who scored seven last year.

Montreal Canadiens had 48 players out to their opening practice in Verdun, Que., yesterday, including defenceman Tom Johnson who suffered a serious eye injury last season. The eye seems to be alright again.

Defence man Doug Harvey, goalie Gump Worsley and forward Bert Olmstead were among those absent as New York Rangers and Vancouver Canucks began joint workouts in Vancouver yesterday. They're expected by Sunday.

Chicago Black Hawks have signed goalie Glenn Hall, first player on the team to have done so. Bobby Hull scored two goals in a scrimmage yesterday at St. Catharines, Ont.

San Francisco Seals of the Western Hockey League have traded centre and captain Harry Fiddler to Montreal Canadiens for defenceman Moe Mantha and the use of three others, Camille Bedard, Norm Wasilowski and Gary Mourie.

Winger Jim More has retired from hockey and has asked his club, Calgary Stampede, to get his amateur card back. He plans to play in Vernon.

Chicago Black Hawks have signed goalie Glenn Hall, first player on the team to have done so. Bobby Hull scored two goals in a scrimmage yesterday at St. Catharines, Ont.

"It's one problem after another—they keep piling up on us," said Sir Frank Packer, head of the Australian syndicate which hopes to take home the bottomless mug, symbol of yachting supremacy, won by the United States 111 years ago and never lost.

"I don't want to be overly pessimistic, but I think there is a good chance Weatherly will win in four straight. The odds are certainly against us."

PAYNE IN PAIN
Alan Payne, the youthful Sydney designer out of whose head came the sleek challenging sloop, was equally despondent over a flood of late misfortunes.

Payne dropped a battery on the toe of his left foot during some gear changes and pressure of last-minute details prevented him from getting immediate medical attention.

STARTS SATURDAY
The best-of-seven races series start at noon Saturday in the Atlantic Ocean at a point some nine miles off Brenton Reef Lightship. The first race will be over a 24-mile course—six miles into the teeth of the wind and six miles back, twice around.

THE PALMER METHOD

by Arnold Palmer

SMOOTH IS THE PUTTING SECRET

Putting is such a precise art that a golfer should always strive to be as smooth and delicate as possible. A good start is a relaxed address position. I flex my knees toward each other for a good, solid base. I feel that I will putt with only my arms.

A still head plays more of a role in putting than anything. If you will keep your eyes glued on the spot where the ball originally was until it stops -- or drops in the cup -- you will have this particular problem licked.

But don't force the ball -- roll it into the cup. Be smooth and easy -- and confident.

Handy tips for all beginners.

The pamphlet's yours for 10¢ and stamped, return envelope sent to Arnold Palmer, c/o this newspaper.

Here It's Still Friendly Game

School children show keen interest in adult driving problems when Const. Ted Owens plays with toy cars and stop signs in a classroom lecture.—(Bud Kinsman.)

Officer Finds Genial Way To Teach Traffic Safety

By HAL LEIREN

It's not easy for a police constable to impress the chief. And when he gets 200 chiefs into a lather of enthusiasm he obviously has something to say.

This was what a self-effacing, young Saanich traffic officer did at the Canadian police chiefs convention held here last week.

Const. Ted Owens showed them a new way to teach traffic safety to school children that earned him raves from St. John's to Victoria.

Simple Idea

The idea is so simple he was surprised no one had thought of it before, he says.

He uses visual aids to show what he means in his lessons on traffic safety.

The equipment is simple. Seven toy cars, two toy trucks, about 20 miniature traffic signs, and four flat metal plates, painted on each side to represent various types of intersections and highway problems. In addition he has a small traffic light, built by himself, which is operated manually.

Plays Full-Time

Chief Bert Pearson thought so much of the 31-year-old constable's ideas that a little over a year ago he set him playing full-time with the boys.

But for Const. Owens it is not a game but the most effective way of getting traffic safety across to 1,500 Saanich youngsters from kindergarten to Grade 13.

"It's based on the idea a picture is worth 1,000 words," he says. "Before I only lectured them, but I could tell from the expressions on their faces I wasn't getting across to them."

Traffic Signs

He lectures each class in a school individually. The metal plate is leaned against the blackboard, the cars and traffic signs stuck on with magnets fastened to their undersides, and presto, he has a ready-made traffic situation.

The cars and signs can be moved about at will to give a graphic illustration of just about anything that might happen on the road.

There is no comparison with the situation that existed in his lectures before he got his "kit" together, says Const. Owens.

"I used to stand up there talking, and I don't think any one listened to me. Now I can build the attention of a group during the whole lecture. I wouldn't go back to teaching traffic safety if you took these things away from me."

None Listened

Const. Owens had been teaching traffic safety in schools for about a year but was troubled by poor response from students.

One night, watching his eight-year-old son run a toy car along the wall of the kitchen, he got the idea for the stand-up metal highways and the magnetized signs and vehicles.

He bought the cars plus one cement truck and one fire engine. The signs, all to scale, were made by cutting them off a Hap Flowers spicing a hotel fountain with soap powder ... Len Ingraham taking a night off.

Do's and Don'ts

An innovation in what Const. Owens calls "Do's and don'ts of driving."

"Frankly, it concerns what is called 'petting in parked cars,'" he says. "I tell boys and girls, in separate classes, the views of the law on things that may occur."

The constable said he has been amazed by the frankness of questions asked. He has been told by teachers that when they have brought the same matter up in health periods they have met only embarrassed silence.

Credits Chief

Const. Owens says a great deal of credit for the new method of teaching safety goes to Chief Pearson, whose enthusiastic support he has had from the beginning.

"The conference (of police chiefs) agreed it was better than anything else in Canada," beams the chief.

Really Amazed

"I was really amazed to learn it was new to them," the curly-haired constable said. "I thought many of them would have seen things like it, especially down East, but they were all thrilled."

Const. Owens has 31 schools he gets to all Grade 13. He has 12 public and 17 private kindergartens he instructs, and he also lectures to PTA groups and service clubs.

Water Safety

Besides traffic safety he tells the youngsters about water safety, and shows them his service revolver and the bullets and explains the danger of firearms.

His program consists of getting to all Grade 1 classes immediately. He then goes back to the schools and covers the higher grades.

"The Grade 1s are the ones who seem to need this the most," he says. "Those in kindergarten are usually driven to school by their parents, but by the time they are in Grade 1 the novelty of driving them to school has worn off."

The most satisfying response has been from high school students, the constable said.

"At first we thought they would adopt the attitude 'We know it all,' but they have been very enthusiastic, most of them asking me back a second time."

Oak Bay Party Heads for Fun

Oak Bay businessmen are planning an odd assortment of activities in conjunction with a big tea party honoring Victoria's centenary.

Tea will be sold on the street, clam chowder will be given away, men will be pitching horseshoes beside Oak Bay Avenue, and there will be an outdoor public auction of merchandise.

A lot depends on how the weather will be Sept. 21 and 22, merchants weren't certain last night what they will do if it rains on those days.

Official municipal tea party for the city of Victoria will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. Sept. 21 on the grounds behind the municipal hall. About 100 civic government, military officials and dignitaries, and old-timers have been invited to attend.

For the general public, Oak Bay United Church women will sell tea both days on Wilmot Place off Oak Bay Avenue. There will be stalls along the avenue, and a street car borrowed from Esquimalt.

Jaycees Will Help City's Mentally Ill

A man who says he personally knows insane people in Victoria whose plight has been "buried," last night described plans by Victoria's Jaycees to try to help the mentally ill.

Joe Kampman, Jaycee liaison man to the local branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association, spoke at last night's general meeting of the Jaycees.

He said some Victoria people are concealing the plight of mentally ill friends or relatives because of "medieval" attitudes towards insanity.

Victoria's Junior Chamber of Commerce plans a "pilot project" for the coming business year which will show Jaycees across Canada how to help the Canadian Mental Health Association.

Mr. Kampman said the Victoria Jaycees plan to provide speakers on behalf of the association to any interested group. Also on the Victoria Jaycee program are Christmas presents for and visits to mental patients.

City Told: Make Room For All-Day Parkers

By IAN TREKETT

All-day parkers in the Cathedral Hill area are continuing to provide headaches for both city and government planners.

Latest in a series of back-and-forth moves comes from Capital Improvement District Commission in the form of a letter from commission member R. M. Grant.

In it Mr. Grant urges city council to accept full responsibility for provision of public off-street parking within Cathedral Hill precinct and to tightly control similar facilities by private developers in the area.

The city in the past pointed out most of the all-day parkers in the area are office workers employed by the provincial government either in B.C. Hydro and Power Authority or the new courthouse.

City parking chairman Ald. Michael Griffin yesterday said he felt the city should not provide facilities for all-day parkers.

NO PRECEDENT

No precedent for such a move exists, the alderman said, since in the case of two downtown parking garages approved by city council recently the cost was underwritten by business, in the downtown area.

"In any event, these new parking garages (on View and lower Yates Streets) are to accommodate shoppers not all-day parkers," said Ald. Griffin. "They would never have been financed from general tax revenue and the business interests in the downtown area have recognized this and are paying for the new facilities."

SURVEY OF NEEDS

The chairman said a survey of parking needs in the Cathedral Hill area, although still incomplete, had indicated the office worker who parked his car on the streets all day was the big problem.

"I don't think city council will agree to get into the business of providing new facilities for all-day parkers," Ald. Griffin said.

MUGGERS' BAN

Mr. Grant suggested banning of curbside parking within the precinct and making the city responsible for off-street park-

Fish Controversy

McPhillips Wants the Facts

Victoria MP A. DeB. McPhillips said yesterday he will seek information on whether sports fishermen from Sooke to Sidney are being stripped of salmon by commercial fishboats operating out of the mouth of Juan de Fuca Strait.

He said he will speak with sports fishermen and boatmen and marine operators in the area to get their opinions.

"I want to take these recommendations down to Ottawa," said Mr. McPhillips, recently appointed parliamentary secretary to Fisheries Minister Angus MacLean.

He will make representations in Ottawa in his capacity of Victoria MP, but naturally, being parliamentary secretary to the minister has his advantages," he said.

Mr. McPhillips is re-reading the Sooke Hotel. He and Mrs. McPhillips will leave for Ottawa Sept. 20.

A suggestion that commercial fishermen and gunneters at the entrance to Juan de Fuca are skimming off "almost all the surface fish, leaving only the deep-running fish got by," was made by Colonel Outdoors Editor Alan Morrison.

He said in his column yesterday the deep-running fish which do get by the commercial fishermen are out of reach of sports fishermen.

He suggested a number of other things which should be investigated in connection with the declining fish supplies which are concerning both commercial and sports fishermen in this area.

"Commercial and sports fishermen both have to be treated fairly," said Mr. McPhillips.

Will Teach English To French Teen-Agers

In Paris Suburb

By JULIE CLARK

Catherine Emery, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Tony Emery, will leave Victoria next Tuesday to teach conversational English to French students in a Paris suburb.

A student of Victoria College, she will be the first from the College to participate in this international exchange of university students.

Dr. Harry Hickman says the system is common in exchanges between Britain and France, but only comparatively recently has been extended to include Canada.

CANADIAN AMBASSADORS

"Although no French students come in return to Canada, the opportunity for our students to be good Canadian ambassadors and interpret our way of life to French youth is invaluable," said Dr. Hickman.

This year approximately 12 Canadians will teach in France.

The Berlitz System of teaching a foreign language is used. This means Catherine will speak only English in the classroom.

EASTER INTERVIEW

First word she received about the assistantship plan was when on Easter holidays in Portland, Ore. "I was hauled back immediately and interviewed by Dr. Hickman, who had chosen two of us from the college."

Sue Dickinson and Catherine were both found equally capable of holding the position and therefore it was left up to the girls who would back down.

Sue decided to stay in order to obtain her degree.

So it's Catherine who's off to teach 16 and 17 year-olds in Vincennes in the south eastern quarter of Paris.

And what will she do once there? As yet she does not know where she will live, but the Louvre.

"I want to spend a week in it," La Comedie Française and exotic restaurants are definite musts. "I want to go to a different type of restaurant every week," she says, "and I shall adore French foods."

Classes run from October 1 to June 30, after which Catherine would like to hitch hike around Europe and to out of the way places like Turkey and Israel.

DEGREE IN CLASSICS

Next September will probably see her returning for her fourth year at Victoria College, where she is pursuing a degree in classics and French. "To me, an experience like this is certainly worth a year away from my own little puddle. And I think it's particularly valuable to go abroad alone because one gets to know the people, which is what I'm interested in."

Armed with lists of friends, Catherine will fly to Toronto, New York, London and finally Paris.

Wine Gives Flair

Take a tip from the French. Introduce a little wine into your everyday cooking, whether in soups, sauces, main dishes or desserts. Here is a recipe for roast of lamb and vermouth.

ROAST LAMB WITH VERMOUTH

Roast of lamb: shoulder, leg, etc., drippings or margarine, salt, pepper, flour, 1/2 cup chicken broth, 1/4 cup dry vermouth, 1 tsp. garlic salt, 1 tsp. dried rosemary, 1/2 onion, minced.

Rub meat with the drippings or margarine. Salt and pepper; rub with flour. Place in a roaster. Brown slowly in a moderate (350 degree) oven for about 1 1/2 hours. Mix broth, wine, garlic salt, rosemary and onion and baste the meat with this sauce until well seared through, allowing 30-35 minutes per pound.

Crabmeat Pancakes

Dressed up pancakes are perfect for luncheons. A fairly typical batter makes very special eating thanks to such flavorful additions as crabmeat, lemon juice and parsley.

Yield: Five or six servings. One can (approx. 6 ounces) crabmeat; 1/4 teaspoon lemon juice; 1 1/4 cups once-sifted all-purpose flour or 1 1/4 cups once-sifted pastry flour; 2 teaspoons baking powder; 1/4 teaspoon salt; 1 teaspoon granulated sugar; 2 eggs; 1/4 cup very-finely-chopped onion; 2 tablespoons finely-chopped parsley; 1 cup milk; 2 tablespoons peanut or other vegetable oil.

Drain and flake crabmeat; sprinkle with lemon juice. Sift together the all-purpose or pastry flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Beat eggs well in a medium-sized mixing bowl; stir in chopped onion, parsley, milk and prepared crabmeat. Add dry ingredients all at once and stir until blended.

Bake batter as pancakes and serve piping hot with butter or margarine and hot tomato sauce.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I have a close friend who has never been on time since I've known her. She's always at least 15 minutes late. I have waited for her as long as an hour.

The woman is never without an excuse—and I've heard them all. She usually starts with "Everything happens to me."

Last week I sat parked in front of her home for 30 minutes, waiting to give her a lift. Then, "Prompt Polly" (that's me) had to walk into a meeting 25 minutes late. My fare was crimson.

She would be shocked if anyone were to suggest that she is selfish or inconsiderate. In fact, in some respects, she's generous to a fault. What, if anything, can be done about a person like this?

PATIENCE WEARING THIN

Dear Thin: Anyone who allows himself to be imposed on time after time is a shoo-out, in my book.

If you honestly resent this woman's selfishness (find a better word and I'll buy it) let her know you are through waiting for her.

The next time you agree to give her a lift instruct her to be out in front of her home—at the curb. Make it plain if she's not in front you'll go right on. Phone before you leave home and remind her of the arrangement.

When she outcours you won't wait she'll be on time.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I cannot agree. Can you help? We have three lovely children. The eldest is a girl 13, then a boy 13, and another

Audrey Hepburn Says

Hubby Guides Her to Chic

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — Audrey Hepburn, called the best dressed film star in the world by one recognized rating, confesses she has a shopping adviser—her husband.

The slender brunette beauty captured honors from 1955 until 1961, along with prominent socialites, on the annual international best-dressed list compiled by a New York Couture Group poll. Then, she was moved on to the list's permanent hall of fame.

While some women leave their men home when they shop, Miss Hepburn takes along her actor-director husband, Mel Ferrer.

"He is very aware of my clothes and very firm about how he wants me to look. He doesn't compromise," she said. Miss Hepburn has definite ideas about her clothes.

She doesn't like: embroidered gloves, lots of jewelry, wrist watches at night unless they're disguised as bracelets, beaded or plastic handbags, fur stoles, capes, mohair sweaters and fabrics with large checks.

"I don't mean to sound pompous. This is just my opinion of what looks good on me. A great deal of jewelry doesn't suit me," she said in an interview.

"I like to wear it only when it improves a dress."

"I wear white gloves only. They should be terribly fresh and new. I love hats. I don't like shoes with doodads, except a little bow or button."

"I don't like stoles unless they match the dress. I don't like scarves unless for warmth. If a coat has a lovely neck line, why spoil it with a scarf? There's something nice about a neck coming cleanly out of collar."

"Tweeds shouldn't look new, but have a wonderful faded look. And raincoats should look a little grubby. Shoes should look new. Slacks should fit well and not be baggy at the knees."

"I like clothes to look narrow and fitted. I don't like full coats or dresses. I like simple clothes with quality. I don't like busy materials or too many colors."

Hot and Sizzling Stop-Light Red Blazes Across the Fashion Scene

Vivi Peterson (left), a former Miss Victoria, and Synnove Peterson, the present Miss Victoria (no kin) modeled for St. Joseph's fashion show yesterday. Vivi wears an Italian knit suit with fedora; Synnove models a high fur hat with vivid plaid three-quarter coat. Clothes were from Eaton's.—(Photos by Peter Chapman.)

By EILEEN LEAROLD

Red, hot and sizzling, lit up the fall fashion scene yesterday at the show given by the T. Eaton Company for St. Joseph's Alumnae in the Empress Hotel's Crystal ballroom.

Red flashed on and off like a neon stop light, in suits, hats, accessories, dresses and coats, eye-catching and exhilarating among the greys and muted tones.

There was a new soft shade, called "pink mink" and good, always-elegant black, but red colors the season coming up.

THE BOWLER

Hats are an entirely new shape, bold and sleek of line. "Romantic" headgear, enflamed and veiled has given way to more of a European look, mannish, with a clean silhouette.

Bowlers, fedoras, cleverly slanted tam O'shanter are beautiful with feminine suits, given just a touch of the tailored with snug leather belts. The alternative to the bowler, is the full over-size pillbox.

FUR BACK

Fur is back as it has never been before. Suits and coats have enormous fur collars with huge fur cuffs, usually in three-quarter length.

Most coats had the shorter sleeve and were worn with longer gloves. Many suits, while severe and uncluttered in line, were lit with beads and or braided for interest.

Big Ben, the Statue of Liberty and the Eiffel Tower formed dramatic backdrop for the mannequins who paraded down the long ramp. Helen Biernes was commentator and Cecily Collins of Eaton's was the show's co-ordinator.

MODELS

Models were Mary Kersey, Penny Tisdale, Nona Damaske, Ann Harris, Paddy Di Castri, Susan Wilson, Beryl Davidson, Joan Randall, Marian Williams, Vivi Peterson, Syn-nove Peterson and male models George Sager, Gordon Jolly and Al Buchan.

Vivi Peterson set the mood of the show in her first costume, a plaid laminated coat in woody green and red, with a striking red Italian fedora.

Paddy di Castri also showed red, in a superb Parisian cut coat with the slightly shorter sleeve, fitted waist. Facing of this coat was in black and white herringbone, to match the tweed sheath underneath. Her hat was a big tam O'Shanter in black velvet.

LOW SLUNG

Another coat shown by Joan was a brilliant blue bulky poodle cloth dramatic for its very, very low slung belt.

One of the most lovely suit costumes was modeled by Ann Harris, elegant, Irish understated grey knit, it had a waist-hugging leather belt and was worn with a high and haughty fur hat.

Another show stopper was Vivi's Italian three-piece suit, the skirt grey, the sweater white, the cardigan, striped in grey and white at the hip-line. With this she wore a velvet side-draping fedora.

Another striking ensemble was Synnove's red suit trimmed in black braid with bulky beaver pill-box hat.

Most vivid hat in the fashion parade was a black cone of jet jewels, called "a space needle hat."

EGYPTIAN

An Egyptian influence appeared in evening wear, somewhat overshadowing the bouffant line of former years. One beautiful model was a gown of Cleopatra blue chiffon in ankle-length, designed with bands of gold embroidery at the hem. A filmy stole swept up from one shoulder across the other and floated away in a diaphanous cloud.

Favorite model of the day, was Susan Wilson, age four, who looked like a fat rabbit in scarlet leggings and white hooded coat and carried off each change like a professional.

During the show's intermission, six student nurses modeled hospital uniforms. Introduced by Mr. Maurice Cowden, they were the Misses Sharon Lubers, Jacqueline Gibson, Linda Haines, Fern Sammon, Sharon Beswick and Anne Cheatham.

Master Gunner To Visit

General Sir Robert Mansergh, GCB, KBE, MC, liaison officer between the Queen and the Royal Regiment of Artillery, will visit Victoria Sept. 28.

He carries the traditional title of Master Gunner of St. James' Park.

The announcement was made by Major G. W. Archer, commanding officer, 5th (B.C.) Independent Medium Battery.

ACTIVE SERVICE
General Mansergh was born in South Africa in 1900. He saw almost continuous active service in the Second World War and was one of the British representatives who received the Japanese surrender at Singapore.

He was appointed Master Gunner in 1960.

The general will arrive by seaplane in the Inner Harbor at 11 a.m. He will be met by a 50-man guard of honor.

He will be entertained at dinner in the PPCL officers' mess at Work Point.

Inspection of all units of the battery will take place in the Bay Street armories at 3 p.m., followed by a reception in the gunners' mess, sergeants' mess and officers' mess. This will give Sir Robert a chance to meet all ranks and former gunners.

DINNER SATURDAY
RCA officers will entertain the Master Gunner at dinner Saturday evening in the Bay Street armories.

The general and his party will leave Victoria Sunday morning for Vancouver.

Sooke Fair In the Black

Proceeds from a large evening turnout and an auction of exhibits kept the books of the Sooke fall fair in the black with a larger financial return than last year, a spokesman said yesterday.

He also said an effort will be made to improve the quality of next year's fall fair by trying to form a 4-H club in Sooke and encouraging exhibitors to upgrade the class of poultry and handicraft exhibits.

City Riders Capture Top Spots

Two Victoria members of B.C.'s riding team helped put the team in top place in the intermediate class in competition at Pebble Beach, Calif., last weekend.

The 18-year-old girls, Jean Dunbar and Pat Donaldson, formed half of the team which defeated many top teams in the United States to obtain the high honor.

PAN-AMERICAN GAMES
At the show, considered one of the most important in the U.S., riders were chosen to represent the states in an international team to compete in the Pan-American Games next year.

In addition to helping her team come out on top Miss Dunbar won the individual award in the intermediate class at the three-day competition.

Other members of the team were Cheryl Frost and Max Zimmerman, both of Naney.

NINE RIBBONS
Elsewhere on the horse show scene Duncan Rimmer and Barbara Johnston, both of Victoria, brought home a total of nine ribbons from the Mission City and district Agricultural and Horticultural Association Fall Fair last Saturday.

Between them they scored two firsts, four seconds and three third places in eight events.

The provincial government yesterday announced a new get-tough welfare-payments policy for the radical Sons of Freedom sect in British Columbia.

Deputy Welfare Minister R. Rickinson said all Freedomites on welfare in the province will now get food vouchers instead of cash.

He also officially announced a cutoff of welfare payments to more than 700 of the sect now on a march from their Krestova shantytown in the Kootenays to Agassiz, site of a new federal prison for convicted Freedomite terrorists.

MARCHERS MOVE

The deputy minister said the welfare is being withheld from the marchers because they are on the move.

"If they returned to their homes we would give food vouchers to those eligible, dealing with individual cases on their merits," he said. "Where women and children particularly are involved we would issue vouchers if the need exists."

NEW POLICY

A tougher line would be taken with families with employable men.

Attorney-General Bonner, whose department has been watching the march developments closely, confirmed the new policy.

The marching Freedomites have complained of a shortage of cash which they said may force them on a hunger strike.

There are some 1,700 Freedomites in the province, many of them on welfare.

Mr. Rickinson said cash payments were stopped because the Freedomites were not using the money for the purpose for which it was given.

Wedding Film Found?

The search for the missing wedding film may be ended while a pair of newlyweds go on with their honeymoon, oblivious of the mystery they have left behind them.

Tuesday's Colonist reported the theft of a camera belonging to Mrs. Anna Pike, 1798 Lillian, containing exposed wedding film.

That afternoon, Mrs. John Fisher, 410 Kingston, reported her son had found a roll of exposed film on Quebec Street Sunday morning. Mrs. Fisher turned the film in to the police to see what develops.

Freezing Saves Life

WINNIPEG (CP) — Doctors at Winnipeg General Hospital stopped the internal bleeding of a 37-year-old Winnipeg man Tuesday by freezing his stomach.

It had been 78 days since the man, a mild haemophilic, started bleeding after an operation.

This brought about coagulation of the blood and slackening of the flow.

Doctors also used an anti-haemophilic factor taken from fresh beef blood, a process used before to help haemophiliacs stop bleeding.

Pedigreed Peonies

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRMS
I mentioned recently in this column that the ideal time to plant or transplant peonies is in the autumn, preferably around the end of September and early October, and I do hope you'll be setting out some of these glorious plants this fall. The peony, you know, is one of our most trouble-free plants, practically immune to insect attack, and with only one disease, botrytis, which can at times be troublesome.

My last peony column was concerned mostly with the digging up, dividing and replanting of overgrown peony slumps. The instructions given for replanting the pieces, though, apply equally to the planting of new, purchased roots.

In buying roots, I think it is best to insist upon named varieties rather than simply asking for a pink, a white, or a red peony. A named variety is a thoroughbred — a plant with a pedigree. Moreover, each named variety has been tested under varying climatic conditions by the American Peony Society and has been awarded "marks" for its performance, with a mark of 100 for the impossible perfect peony. This rating is usually quoted in any good peony grower's catalogue, which makes it an easy matter to pick out the best kinds.

For your guidance, here are a few varieties which are thriving in my garden and which have found favor with the flower-arranging members of my family. The figure in brackets is the rating awarded by the American Peony Society; remember—the higher the figure, the better the plant.

FESTIVA MAXIMA (83) This is the first of the hybrid peonies to open its blooms in my garden. The Fern-leafed or Chinese peony, which isn't a hybrid, beats it by about 10 days. Festiva Maxima is one of our real old-timers, bred and introduced well over 100 years ago. The flowers are white with flecks of crimson on the centre petals, very large and as round as a grapefruit. One small fault is a tendency to floppiness in the foliage, and I find it necessary to put one of those wire hoop gadgets around its middle to support the outer stems.

SARAH BERNHARDT (97) By far the most popular peony in our garden for vase and bowl work, bearing very large, beautifully shaped flowers in apple-blossom pink, prodigal with its blooms, and I have had as many as 14 lovely flowers from a single elderly plant. Sarah Bernhardt has considerably more fragrance than the run-of-the-mill peonies, and lasts a long time in water. It is later than most in coming into bloom, which I think is an advantage, for it keeps the show going after the early birds have packed up for the year.

KARL ROSENFELD (88) This is about the darkest of all the red peonies, providing a welcome contrast with the light pastel shades of the others. It is a strong grower, needing no stakes, and is brilliant and showy, but unfortunately without any fragrance.

LE CYGNE (99) The Swan is unquestionably the finest of the white peonies, and has the highest rating ever awarded by the American Peony Society—only one mark away from perfection. An early bloomer, it has milk-white flowers and incurved petals, like those of the incurved chrysanthemums. I don't think it is quite as fond of our Pacific Coast soil and climate as some of its mates, for its growth is painfully slow, and I doubt if a root planted this fall would bloom much before the summer of 1964. Worth waiting for, though.

ASA GRAY (81) As you see, Asa Gray's rating isn't as high as some others, but we like it because of its unusual color—pale lilac sprinkled with lilac dots. This is the most fragrant of all our peonies.

SOLANGE (97) I think this one attracts more attention from visitors than any other peony we grow. The color is a creamy white, but suffused with a reddish golden light. It is a bit stingy with its flowers in our soil—four blooms to the plant is the best we have had—and it has no discernible fragrance.

JOHN CROSBY, Our New Man in Paris

French Drinking Milk!

PARIS — I have arrived to take up residence in the City of Light. It's raining. It continues to rain for three days. Maybe it isn't Paris. Maybe it's London. No, you can tell it's Paris because there are so many Americans in it.

What about the clichés about the French? We know all about the Frenchman, don't we? He loves his food, the little dishes transmitted from mother to daughter for generations. He drinks heavily. He hates milk and all that. Well, in the current Paris-Match Jean-Pierre Cartier has a lovely time demolishing some of these illusions.

In the last ten years, Cartier points out, the Frenchman drank much less (consumption of aperitifs is down 23 per cent, hard liquor down 10 per cent). He eats fewer potatoes and surprisingly, less bread.

He drinks a little fresh milk and 80 per cent more of the powdered milk than ten years ago.

On this page earlier this week, ART BUCHWALD said au revoir to Paris after 14 years. His scintillating column will in future be dated Washington. But the European scene will not go unrecorded. Today, columnist JOHN CROSBY makes his bow as Our Man in Paris.

He's drinking colas (non-alcoholic drinks are up 145 per cent) and—oh, the horror of it all—his wife is feeding him powdered soup (up 182 per cent) instead of those little soups kept simmering at the back of the stove — those recipes she got from mother.

Cartier's article is full of little surprises, but a reassuring thought is that the people who will be most surprised by his figures are the French themselves.

Europe is a fascinating place to live in and write about, right now because all the clichés are going out the window.

ist who has written some 400 novels in his life. But it's not about his novels I wish to talk, but about moving.

Georges is the world's greatest authority on moving one's residence, having changed his 29 times in the last 30 years. He has resided variously all over France, Holland, South America, Africa, India, California, Arizona, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Connecticut, and Switzerland.

(Incidentally, he learned English listening to American television, becoming the only Belgian ever to acquire a Bronx accent which he picked up from Molly Goldberg.)

I explained that I was a little nervous about this new country. "I have a little advice," said Georges. "When you go to a new country, do your shopping yourself. There you meet the people, the true people, the shrews of the country, in the market."

"If you go to a little market with your little basket, after two or three days, everyone will love you and everyone will help you. It's the best contact, the people from the street, not the artificial contacts, the intellectuals, but the real people, the strong people, the people who make the food."

"People are only foreign when you look at them as a tourist. When you look at them as people, they're never foreign. Tourists are always looking for what is different in a country. If you look for the resemblances, people are the same all over the world."

What a comforting man he is, Georges Simenon!

LET'S TALK

By Rudolf Plesch

Don Herold is a nice man who's been making a splendid career of never talking himself seriously. He's a humorist, a cartoonist, a writer of light articles and books, and a nationally known specialist in funny, chummy, low-key, marvellously effective advertising.

Most of his work contains a cartoon of a funny-looking, egg-headed man with a pointed nose. That's Don Herold himself, and he's been wise enough to laugh at himself heartily all his life.

His latest bundle of chuckles is a little book, The Happy Hypochondriac (Dodd, Mead), in which he makes excellent capital out of his most conspicuous failing. It's full of delightful lines like, "I never die in my sleep; I don't sleep that well."

But there's also a sore of wisdom in the book, as in so many really first-rate books of humor. Herold says, rightly, that hypochondriacs have a clear edge on the rest of mankind. If you complain of imaginary ills all the time, chances are that you'll never neglect any real ailment that may befall you.

Herold says hypochondriacs are almost certain to live longer because they're hypochondriacs. He goes on: "It is generally known that women live an average of six years longer than their husbands, and the explanation usually has been that Nature builds women tougher, so they can bear children. However, a research team from Cornell Medical College recently studied the medical histories of several hundred telephone workers and concluded that the cause may stem from the fact that women baby themselves.

Clearly, he has a point there. I'm just the opposite of a hypochondriac myself (I don't even have a regular doctor), and Herold started me thinking about some of my own experiences. Like the time I slipped on a rock during my summer vacation and simply refused to pay any attention to the pain.

For ten solid weeks I went around limping, until finally the pain became so excruciating that something had to be done. I went to the hospital, and X-rays showed I'd broken a metatarsal bone in my foot. When I told the doctor the accident had happened four weeks ago, he gave me a very long look. Then he put me in a plaster cast up to my hip for six weeks.

That there was the time I, I would have been much better off had I been a happy hypochondriac like Don Herold.

Critics Downgrade 'Superb' Olivier

By SHEILAH GRAMAM

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Sir Laurence Olivier rated a poor second to 19-year-old Sarah Miles with the British reviews of Term of Trial and Three Men in a Boat came in nowhere. This I cannot understand. Sarah was good, but Sir Laurence was superb, in my opinion. I believe his bad notices stem partly from the fact that he goes to the most fantastic lengths to avoid the press, and slams them at all times. All rather silly.

The French love Olivier. When Term of Trial director Peter Glenville asked permission to do some filming inside the Louvre, he received a firm "certainly not." But when he explained that, in the film, Olivier, a schoolmaster was conducting a trip in Paris he was told, "Ah, for Sir Laurence, but of course."

Natalie Wood and Tony Curtis are odd-on favorites at Columbia for The Great Sebastian. The stage version starred Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne.

Mervyn Le Roy is due in the big town to beat the drums for his movie version of "Gypsy." And to visit on Warner, now putting Margaret Leighton and Anthony Quinn through their theatre pieces in "This Town."

Rita Giam is bombing nymphomaniac roles out of her sublimated treacher. Rita won top prize at the Berlin film festival this year for her playing of an oversexed lady. In No. 10 "I don't object to sex," Rita explains. "But I won't go into cheap exploitation pictures to make in on my new sex symbol status." Rita, hear.

Peter O'Toole gives from the $100,000 Lawrence of Arabia out to the film version of the $25,000 Waiting for Godot, to be made in Ireland while he's burning very poorly as a nymphomaniac. Peter had his hair shaved and dyed blonde for Lawrence. He has now returned to his dark curls.

Olivia Flessinger has Frances Noyes in mind for The Other Side of the Coin which he will sign in May for next summer.

Very Strange Look

For ten solid weeks I went around limping, until finally the pain became so excruciating that something had to be done. I went to the hospital, and X-rays showed I'd broken a metatarsal bone in my foot. When I told the doctor the accident had happened four weeks ago, he gave me a very long look. Then he put me in a plaster cast up to my hip for six weeks.

That there was the time I, I would have been much better off had I been a happy hypochondriac like Don Herold.

United Appeal Drive Goes Into High Gear

Two Accidents Send Five to Hospitals

Five people were rushed to hospital from two accidents that happened within minutes of each other on rain-soaked Douglas Street last night.

One of the accidents involved the new $13,000 Saanich emergency ambulance which was rushing injured football player Gary Haut, 17, 920 Jasmine, to St. Joseph's Hospital.

The youth had broken his collar-bone while playing in a pick-up football game at Grand Avenue School.

The ambulance slammed into the rear-end of a car police said was driven by Mrs. Louise Johnson, 3589 Quadra, and sent it across Douglas Street near the Caledonia intersection.

Mike Cox, 18, 580 Agnes, who was accompanying the injured football player in the ambulance, suffered an injured hand in the crash. Both Haut and Cox were transferred to the city police ambulance and were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Mrs. Alvina Graham, 928 Darwin, a passenger in the Johnson car and Mrs. Johnson were later taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in a police car. All four were released after treatment.

In the second accident at Douglas and Pandora, about 8 p.m., an elderly pedestrian was knocked about five feet when hit by a car while crossing Pandora.

Hugh McLellan, 72, 845 Balmoral, was in fairly good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital last night.

Police said McLellan was crossing Pandora when he was struck by a car driven by Gary Stewart, 18, 4209 Douglas Street, which was turning left onto Pandora off Douglas.

Heart Massage Fails on Dock

CAMPBELL RIVER—Surgical heart massage on a dock here failed to save the life of Inland Airlines pilot Thomas Archibald, 26, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday.

He died Sept. 5 after his plane crashed into Village Bay Lake as he attempted a landing at Quadra Island. The jury said death was accidental and blamed no one; the department of transport reported it found no faults in the plane.

Greater Victoria's United Appeal campaign moved into high gear yesterday as three more big divisions working toward the $360,000 goal.

The small firms division's 143 canvassers are led by chairman E. A. Benton, the section canvassing public service organization employees is chaired by Capt. R. G. Newell and the industrial-commercial division is headed by co-chairman P. B. Scourah and E. C. Newert.

A suggestion by an Ottawa car union member that motorists pay parking tickets in blood—a gift of a pint per ticket—is "a good idea but it's beyond me to bring it into force," city police chief John Blackstock said yesterday.

Magistrate William Ostler, however, said "you just can't do it" unless there's legislation.

Tenders opened in Saanich yesterday for a health and welfare building on Vernon Avenue near the new police-fire headquarters were lower than expected, officials said. Lowest of seven bids was $143,797 submitted by G. H. Wheaton Ltd.

Exhibition Advertising Enterprises has dropped plans to appeal a court judgment dismissing its claim for damages against the Victoria Jaycee fair over a contract involving the raffle of a model home, the Jaycees learned last night.

The Jaycees announced winners of their good-citizenship essays on Island themes were Cheryl Borris, $150; Christine Zaccarelli, $100, and Brenda Boag, $50.

A new 36-foot aluminum tender barge built by McKay-Cormack Ltd., 130 Kingston, will be accepted by the navy at noon Monday. It will be used aboard the repair ship Cape Breton.

LT.-CMDR. C. A. Prosser, skipper of HMCS Oriole, the navy's local sailing training ship, has left to take in the America's Cup races starting Saturday from the New York Yacht Club. He is expected to crew aboard one of the NYCC craft aiding in the international classic.

UBCM Hears Tough Talk

KAMLOOPS—An end to increasing participation of senior governments in financing municipal services may not be clearly in sight, but it exists just the same, Municipal Affairs Minister Wesley Black said yesterday.

Mr. Black was speaking to 800 money-hungry delegates to the opening session of the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention here.

It was a tough speech to delegates who have come to the convention determined to get more provincial help, particularly in the field of education.

TAX INCREASE

Earlier, executive members of the UBCM had in hand a recommendation for an increase in the provincial sales tax from the present five per cent.

'Work For Welfare'

KAMLOOPS (CP)—Municipal spokesmen called Wednesday for hotel farms where B.C.'s single, unemployed men would work for their social assistance.

A report issued by the welfare committee of the Union of B.C. Municipalities said the plan would apply only to "idlers."

Delegates at the opening session of the UBCM convention were also urged to ask senior governments to remove unemployed persons who can work from social welfare rolls.

The report said these people are the responsibility of the National Employment Service.

'Canada's Defence Only Harmful In Nuclear Attack'

By ED COBROGROVE

Canada's non-nuclear air defence weapons would be more harmful than helpful to the population of this country in the event of an all-out nuclear attack on North America.

This startling fact was disclosed by the men charged with the air defence of North America to this reporter during a tour of the awe-inspiring NORAD headquarters at Ent Air Force Base, Colorado Springs.

The information was not pushed—nor was it withheld—when key officers at the gigantic air defence complex were asked pointblank whether Canada's lack of nuclear warheads for defensive missiles fired by the five fighter-interceptor squadrons and two Bomarc bases endangered the continent's air defences.

STAFF ANSWERS

That question was answered in part by Col. A. L. Cox, USAF, director, threat assessment and deputy chief of staff, intelligence; Lt. Col. R. M. Ahalt, intelligence officer; Lt. Col. G. J. Pruett, United States Army, plans officer; Lt. Col. J. L. Beck, USAF, operations officer, and Maj. F. F. Hickey, U.S. Army, operations officer at the combat operations centre.

LATER CONFIRMED

The answers were later confirmed in an interview with the deputy commander of NORAD, Air Marshal Roy Stemon, RCAF.

These officers say the lack of nuclear warheads in Canada's contribution to continental security means that invading bombers, even though they are "downed" by Canadian defensive forces, will be able to explode their nuclear bombs, transforming vast areas of Canada into fallout-polluted wastelands.

SIMPLE FUSES

"Dead man" fuses are standard equipment on American nuclear bombs. The fuse is a simple device which guarantees the nuclear payload aboard a bomber will be exploded in the event the bomber is shot down.

"We have no doubt the Russian bombs are similarly equipped," said one of the officers at the briefing session.

Freedomites Broke Resort to Sect Diet

GRAND FORKS, B.C. (CP)—Lack of money is forcing British Columbia's marching Sons of Freedom brothelkeepers to obey the rules of their religion.

Strictly speaking, Freedomites aren't supposed to eat meat or take liquor. But in recent years, only the older members of the sect have adhered to the faith.

Now the hardship of a 400-mile trek from the British Columbia Kootenays to a Freedomite prison are bringing younger Freedomites back into the fold.

Storekeepers close to the encampment of about 800 Freedomites on a Grand Forks farm reported heavy sales of canned meat when the Sons arrived here six days ago.

One hotelman said his stock of bottled beer was sold out the night they came to town.

But Wednesday, both stores and beer parlors reported their sales had dropped back to normal, apparently because the Freedomites have run out of ready cash.

The sect blames its financial plight on a decision by welfare officials at Victoria to stop social assistance payments to the Freedomites. (See Page 2)

Hundreds of members of the sect have been living on social welfare since their menfolk were sentenced to jail terms up to 21 years in the past year for bombings and arson.

An advance party of Freedomites has received a hostile reception from municipal officials in the Agassiz area. Lack of any prospect of a place to settle near the prison has stalled the westward trek.

B.C. Wants Britain In Market

The British Columbia government remains solidly in favor of leaving Britain free to join the European Common Market but it won't make its position officially known in London for two reasons.

B.C. Trade Minister Robert Bonner said yesterday the chief reason is that no matter how much the province disavows with the federal government on the question it would not attempt to undermine federal policy in an international sphere.

SECOND REASON

The second reason is there exists no avenue of protocol by which B.C. could present its views to the United Kingdom government.

"But here at home it's different," said Mr. Bonner.

He was harshly critical of any obstacles put in the way of Britain's ECU entry by Canada.

SOVEREIGN INDEPENDENCE

"Canada for many years sought independence of Great Britain. Having achieved independence we are now trying to impose superdependence."

Canada's present position, he said, adopts the conviction "that independence is only supposed to work one way."

Britain's entry into the European trading bloc would help stabilize Europe politically and

U.K. Reply

Saturday Key Day In Talks

LONDON (CP)—Commonwealth criticism of Britain's bid to join the Common Market piled up again Wednesday as Commonwealth prime ministers wound up the first stage of their momentous conference.

Prime Minister Macmillan is expected to deliver Britain's reply Saturday after a cabinet meeting Thursday that will review his government's position.

BRITAIN'S POSITION

Conference sources said Saturday could be a "most significant" day, but there was no indication Macmillan's government will change its determination to press on with negotiations to join Europe.

Catholic Flood End of Liberty?

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—The inflexible authority under Rome of the United Church of Canada's warned the end of liberty as we have known it and as we deem it necessary for life.

Warning against "infiltration" in Canada, Dr. McLeod said "political parties are subservient in the interest of a majority, the press is subservient in the interest of circulation, and Protestantism is ineffective because of its divisions."

Roman Catholic immigrants "may herald and achieve the end of liberty as we have known it," said Rt. Rev. Hugh A. McLeod in his final message as moderator of the United Church.

NEVER LOSE NIGHT

He suggested religious freedom is greater under communism than in a Roman Catholic regime.

Dr. McLeod flayed Canadian immigration policy in a speech stressing that the church must never lose sight of the basic need to propagate its message and grow.

He addressed the first business session of the 24th General Council of the United Church, the biennial policy-making assembly. He is a former minister of Victoria's First United Church of Canada.

James Ralph Mutchmor was chosen moderator of the Church's governing general council that shrugged off sharp memories of controversy and declined to play it safe.

ACT IN SPIRIT

Electing a controversial figure to lead the church for the next two years was an act in the spirit of the candidate himself. Even his critics won't accuse James Mutchmor of taking the easy line of compromise.

As secretary of the United Church Board of Evangelism and Social Service for the past quarter century, Dr. Mutchmor has waged a continuing war against immoral behavior and

Chinese Surround Indian Border Post

NEW DELHI (AP)—Chinese troops have entered northwest India and surrounded an Indian outpost on the lofty, forbidding Himalayan trails used by the Dalai Lama in his escape from the Chinese captors of Tibet, authorities here said Wednesday.

The Chinese in the last four years have penetrated and withdrawn from the area three times previously.

An informed source said the Indian outpost of 20 Assam riflemen was surrounded Tuesday by 15 times as many Chinese troops inside territory India has long claimed and occupied.

Unconfirmed reports reaching here said the Chinese dispatched the Indian and then armed the Indians and then marched some miles farther into Indian territory. There was no indication of any fighting.

Conflicting reports indicated the Chinese might be pushing toward the important Buddhist monastery town of Tawang, 19 miles inside Indian territory.

The Dalai Lama now lives in exile at Dharamsala, a small Indian Himalayan town.

'Soviet Tactics Disrupt Goal Of Outer Space Co-operation'

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—the 17-nation disarmament talks had proposed a declaration that the Soviet Union's tactics in disarmament negotiations are disrupting the goal of outer space co-operation in outer space.

Addressing the 18-nation disarmament committee on time was being devoted to the peaceful use of outer space, Paul Trembly, new Canadian ambassador, said Russia is trying to introduce new provisions that properly belong in that would have banned outer space all weapons of mass destruction—but it was promptly rejected by Russia.

The basic Canadian philosophy toward the problem of achieving co-operation in outer space is to accept the largest common denominator of agreement in the hope initial success will encourage the enlargement of the area of co-operation.

Trembly noted that External Affairs Minister Howard Green

Warning to All Found at Bikini

Above all, they found an urgent warning to humanity. The story is on Page 5.

Officer Finds Genial Way To Teach Traffic Safety

By HAL LEIREN

It's not easy for a police constable to impress the chief. And when he gets 200 chiefs into a lather of enthusiasm he obviously has something to say.

This was what a self-effacing, young Saanich traffic officer did at the Canadian police chiefs convention held here last week.

Const. Ted Owens showed them a new way to teach traffic safety to school children that earned him raves from St. John's to Victoria.

Simple Idea

The idea is so simple he was surprised no one had thought of it before, he says.

He uses visual aids to show what he means in his lessons on traffic safety.

The equipment is simple. Seven toy cars, two toy trucks, about 20 miniature traffic signs, and four flat metal plates, painted on each side to represent various types of intersections and highway problems. In addition he has a small traffic light, built by himself, which is operated manually.

Plays Full-Time

Chief Bert Pearson thought so much of the 21-year-old constable's ideas that a little over a year ago he set him playing full-time with the toys.

But for Const. Owens it is not a game but the most effective way of getting traffic safety across to 12,000 Saanich

City Told: Make Room For All-Day Parkers

By IAN STREET

All-day parkers in the Cathedral Hill area are continuing to provide headaches for both city and government planners.

Latest in a series of back-and-forth moves comes from Capital Improvement District Commission in the form of a letter from commission member R. M. Grant.

In it Mr. Grant urges city council to accept full responsibility for provision of public off-street parking within Cathedral Hill precinct and to tightly control similar facilities by private developers in the area.

The city in the past pointed out most of the all-day parkers in the area are office workers employed by the provincial government either in B.C. Hydro and Power Authority or the new courthouses.

City parking chairman Ald. Michael Griffin yesterday said he felt the city should not provide facilities for all-day parkers.

NO PRECEDENT
No precedent for such a move exists, the chairman said, since in the case of two downtown parking garages approved by city council recently the cost was underwritten by businesses in the downtown area.

"In any event, these new parking garages on View and lower Yates Streets are to accommodate shoppers not all-day parkers," said Ald. Griffin. "They would never have been financed from general tax revenue and the business interests in the downtown area have recognized this and are paying for the new facilities."

SURVEY OF NEEDS
The chairman said a survey of parking needs in the Cathedral Hill area, although still incomplete, had indicated the office worker who parked his car on the streets all day was the big problem.

"I don't think city council will agree to get into the business of providing new facilities for all-day parkers," Ald. Griffin said.

HIGHGUEST BAN
Mr. Grant suggested banning of curbside parking within the precinct and making the city responsible for off-street park-

No School Shifts Cowichan Rules

Best Rider Had 18 To Spare

PORT ALBERNI—Bonnie Richmond, riding Sals, had 18 points to spare when she won the aggregate trophy at the recent fall fair horse show.

Runnerup with 21 points was Susan McCarthy, who was awarded the McCulloch Perpetual Trophy for best-turned-out horse and rider.

More than 30 horses and riders took part in the meet in the new ring prepared by Alberni Valley Riders Club on the fairgrounds.

DUNCAN—The Cowichan school board has decided not to introduce the shift system or scatter pupils among thinly-populated schools but to have them attend classes in temporary accommodations at Duncan Elementary, Maple Bay, Alexander, Cowichan Station and Cobble Hill schools.

About 60 students of a total of 3,669 in the district are affected by the emergency measure, which allows teachers to remain with their initial groups for the whole school year.

The planning division of the department of education is preparing working plans for three projects—one classroom and activity room at Bench, one classroom and a covered play area at Mill Bay and two classrooms and an activity room at Maple Bay elementary schools.

PERMANENT HOME
After completion, 27 students from Cowichan Station will move to permanent quarters at Bench and 34 from Cobble Hill to Mill Bay. At Maple Bay, temporary classrooms will be eliminated.

School board officials explain a period of time must elapse between successful passing of a referendum and the start of construction. The referendum was passed June 1961, following registration of the bylaw, another waiting period of one month was required.

MEETING TONIGHT
Immediately after the deadline, sketch plans for Quamichan and Duncan elementary schools were sent to the department for approval. Tenders for the Quamichan project will be opened at a special meeting of the board tonight. After the successful tender has been approved by the department construction will begin.

Working plans for Duncan Elementary are in Victoria waiting for approval of a call for tenders.

Dos and Don'ts

An innovation in what Const. Owens calls "Dos and don'ts of driving."

"Frankly, it concerns what is called 'petting in parked cars,'" he says. "I tell boys and girls, in separate classes, the views of the law on things that may occur."

The constable said he has been amazed by the frankness of questions asked. He has been told by teachers that when they have brought the same matter up in health periods they have met only embarrassed silence.

Credits Chief

Const. Owens says a great deal of credit for the new method of teaching safety goes to Chief Pearson, whose enthusiastic support he has had from the beginning.

"The conference (of police chiefs) agreed it was better than anything else in Canada," beams the chief.

Massage of Heart Fails on Dock After Pilot's Crash

CAMPBELL RIVER—Surgical heart massage on a dock here failed to save the life of Island Airlines pilot Thomas Archibald, 26, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday.

He died Sept. 5 after his plane crashed into Village Bay Lake as he attempted a landing at Quadra Island. The jury said death was accidental and blamed no one; the department of transport reported it found no faults in the plane.

Village Bay resident John Noble, a former RCAF and TCA pilot, said he saw the plane plummet into the lake. He and a visitor, Trevor James of Vancouver, dashed out in a speedboat and dived down to the sinking plane to release the pilot.

They brought Archibald to the surface and took him to the dock, where Mr. James performed artificial respiration until the arrival of Dr. G. S. Riley from here by plane.

The doctor massaged the heart from the exterior, then made an incision for interior massage, but Archibald died.

Zoners Urge Brakes

NANAIMO—The advisory planning commission has decided to recommend to city council refusal of a rezoning application by Shell Oil for its Nicol Street station.

The commission considered brakes should be applied to any trend on the part of distributors to become retailers of general merchandise.

PLANS UPSET
Planning Commissioner Earl Fletcher said: "Irrespective of what type of business should ask for special zoning, we could be upsetting present city plans if we allowed it."

"If, however, the city should see fit to permit zoning of this nature, then it should be on condition that retail store hours restrictions should apply."

A cheque for $1,200 from concession profits at the recent Navy Salute to Victoria will be turned over to Mayor R. B. Wilson Monday.

Profits from the concessions, holding stands, refreshment booths and other exhibits were designated to be used for charitable purposes, a spokesman said.

It is not known which charity will receive the money. "This is up to the mayor," the official added.

Bail of $36,000 Set in Nanaimo

NANAIMO—Magistrate Lionel Beaver Potts set bail of $36,000 Wednesday when remanding Edward Watherston of Vancouver. This is believed to be the highest bail figure ever set in the local court.

Watherston faces a charge of conspiring to defraud William George Parrish of Victoria of $9,000 in Nanaimo Aug. 11.

Crown prosecutor Harold Hine had asked for bail of $30,000 in view of the amount of money involved in connected transactions, $153,000, and because Watherston was alleged to have jumped bail at one time in the U.S.

Watherston elected for trial by magistrate. His case will be heard about the first week in October.

Savings Stolen

A Duncan Creek woman, who saved for a year to see her blind mother in Victoria, had her purse containing all her money and personal papers stolen from her car yesterday.

Mrs. William Moore, left the purse in the front of the car at 1770 Walnut. When she returned less than five minutes later, it was gone.

She estimated it contained about $120, what was left of her $300 savings. Mrs. Moore can be reached at EV 1-0002.

Fish Controversy

McPhillips Wants the Facts

Victoria MP A. DeB. McPhillips said yesterday he will seek information on whether sports fishermen from Sooke to Sidney are being stripped of salmon by commercial fishermen operating out of the mouth of Juan de Fuca Strait.

He said he will speak with sports fishermen and boatmen and marine operators in the area to get their opinions.

"I want to take these recommendations down to Ottawa," said Mr. McPhillips, recently appointed parliamentary secretary to Fisheries Minister Angus MacLean.

He will make representations in Ottawa in his capacity of Victoria MP, but naturally, being parliamentary secretary to the minister, has its advantages," he said.

Mr. McPhillips is residing at the Hudson Hotel. He and Mrs. McPhillips will leave for Ottawa Sept. 20.

A suggestion that commercial fishermen and gillnetters at the entrance to Juan de Fuca are skimming off "almost all the surface fish, leaving only the deep-running fish fisheries go hand in hand. "You cannot say there is a certain group that benefits from fish and another from power," he said. "Each benefits from both."

Commercial and sport fishermen both benefit from hydro development, but without the fishing industry power development might not be profitable.

OWN TROUBLE
"B.C. Hydro made their own trouble when they came in and produced what they needed without first considering the fish," said Mr. Haig-Brown.

"Although the run has been damaged, it is hoped that over the years it will build up again," he said.

Mr. Haig-Brown said he feels the value of hydro and get by," was made by Colonist Outdoor Editor Alec Merriam.

He said in his column yesterday the deep-running fish which do get by the commercial fishermen are out of reach of sports fishermen.

He suggested a number of other things which should be investigated in connection with the dwindling fish supplies which are concerning both commercial and sports fishermen in this area.

"Commercial and sports fishermen both have to be treated fairly," said Mr. McPhillips.

UBCM Hears Tough Talk

KAMLOOPS—An end to increasing participation of senior governments in financing municipal services may not be clearly in sight, but it exists just the same, Municipal Affairs Minister Wesley Black said yesterday.

Mr. Black was speaking to 600 money-hungry delegates to the opening session of the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention here.

It was a tough speech to delegates who have come to the convention determined to get more provincial help, particularly in the field of education.

TAX INCREASE

Earlier, executive members of the UBCM had in hand a recommendation for an increase in the provincial sales tax from the present five per

'Work For Welfare'

KAMLOOPS (CP)—Municipal spokesmen called Wednesday for hostel farms where B.C.'s single, unemployed men would work for their social assistance.

A report issued by the welfare committee of the Union of B.C. Municipalities said the plan would apply only to "drifters."

Delegates at the opening session of the UBCM convention were also urged to ask senior governments to remove unemployed persons who can work from social welfare rolls.

The report said these people are the responsibility of the National Employment Service.

Freedomites Broke Resort to Sect Diet

GRAND FORKS, B.C. (CP)—Lack of money is forcing British Columbia's marching Sons of Freedom Doukhobors to obey the rules of their religion.

Strictly speaking, Freedomites aren't supposed to eat meat or take liquor. But in recent years, only the older members of the sect have adhered to the faith.

Younger Freedomites lack into the fold. Storekeepers close to the encampment of about 800 Freedomites on a Grand Forks farm reported heavy sales of canned meat when the Sons arrived here six days ago.

One hotelman said his stock of bottled beer was sold out the night the sect came to town. But Wednesday, both stores and beer parlors reported their sales had dropped back to normal.

Apparently because the Freedomites have run out of ready cash.

The sect blames its financial plight on a decision by welfare officials at Victoria to stop social assistance payments to the Freedomites. (See Page 2.)

Hundreds of members of the sect have been living on social welfare since their menfolk were sentenced to jail terms up to 28 years in the past year for bombings and arson.

'Canada's Defence Only Harmful In Nuclear Attack'

By ED COSGROVE

Canada's non-nuclear air defence weapons would be more harmful than helpful to the population of this country in the event of an all-out nuclear attack on North America.

This startling fact was disclosed this week by the men charged with the air defence of North America to this reporter during a tour of the awe-inspiring NORAD headquarters at Ent Air Force Base, Colorado Springs.

The information was not pushed—nor was it withheld—when key officers at the gigantic air defence complex were asked point-blank whether Canada's lack of nuclear warheads for defensive missiles fired by the five fighter-interceptor squadrons and two Bomarc bases endangered the continent's air defenses.

STAFF ANSWERS

That question was answered in part by Col. A. L. Cox, USAF, director, threat assessment and deputy chief of staff, intelligence; Lt. Col. R. M. Ahalt, intelligence officer; Lt. Col. G. J. Pruett, United States Army, plans officer; Lt. Col. J. L. Beck, USAF, operations officer, and Maj. F. F. Hickey, U.S. Army, operations officer at the combat operations centre.

LATER CONFIRMED

Their answers were later confirmed in an interview with the deputy commander of NORAD, Air Marshal Roy Slemmon, RCAF.

These officers say the lack of nuclear warheads in Canada's contribution to continental security means that invading bombers, even though they are "downed" by Canadian defensive forces, will be able to explode their nuclear bombs, transforming vast areas of Canada into fallout-polluted wastelands.

SIMPLE FUSES

"Dead man" fuses are standard equipment on American nuclear bombs. The fuse is a simple device which guarantees the nuclear payload aboard a bomber will be exploded in the event the bomber is shot down.

"We have no doubt the Russian bombs are similarly equipped," said one of the officers at the briefing session.

DR. HUGH McLEOD

Catholic Flood End of Liberty?

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—The infallible authority under Rome they may herald and achieve the end of liberty as we have known it, and as we deem it necessary for life.

Warning against "infiltration" in Canada, Dr. McLeod said "political parties are subservient in the interest of a majority, the press is subservient in the interest of circulation, and Protestantism is ineffective because of its divisions."

moderator of the United Church.

NEVER LOSE SIGHT

He suggested religious freedom is greater under communism than in a Roman Catholic regime.

Dr. McLeod flayed Canadian immigration policy in a speech stressing that the church must never lose sight of the basic need to propagate its message and grow.

He addressed the first business session of the 20th General Council of the United Church, the biennial policy-making assembly. He is a former minister of Victoria's First United.

VERY VULNERABLE

"Who will say that Protestants in Russia do not have more liberty than those in Spain, Portugal or Colombia? A democracy is very vulnerable to infiltration—by reason of our vaunted tolerance we are in danger of losing our freedom by default."

"Perhaps Roman Catholics have been the only eligible immigrants available in large numbers, and as people they are capable of greatly enriching our nation," Dr. McLeod said.

FANATICAL PEOPLE

"Of course, it is contrary to the rules and regulations governing prisons, and we'll be watching... It could be that our problem will be the force of fanatical people who might attempt to enter... Prisons are built to keep people inside but an abnormal amount of pressure from many determined people might cause a different action."

NOT ALLOWED

"We will not tolerate any trespass on Crown lands," he said. "No groups of citizens will be allowed to force their way in. However, any legal visitors will be treated cordially, as always." The Freedomite marchers, who now number about 900, will hold another meeting today to discuss their plans.

Warning to All Found at Bikini

Eight years ago a hydrogen bomb was exploded over the remote Pacific atoll of Bikini. Recently, an Italian film expedition called at the tiny island to see what had happened. They found hordes of bewildered birds tending thousands and thousands of eggs that have never hatched. And they found skeletons of giant sea-turtles which had committed suicide. Above all, they found an urgent warning to humanity. The story is on Page 5.

The British Columbia government remains solidly in favor of leaving Britain free to join the European Common Market but it won't make its position officially known in London for two reasons.

B.C. Trade Minister Robert Bonner said yesterday the chief reason is that no matter how much the province disagrees with the federal government on the question it would not attempt to undermine federal policy in an international sphere.

SECOND REASON

The second reason is there exists no avenue of protocol by which B.C. could present its views to the United Kingdom government.

"But here at home it's different," said Mr. Bonner.

He was harshly critical of any obstacles put in the way of Britain's ECM entry by Canada.

BOUGHT INDEPENDENCE

"Canada for many years sought independence of Great Britain. Having achieved independence we are now trying to impose superintendence."

Canada's present position, he said, adopts the conviction "that independence is only supposed to work one way."

Britain's entry into the European trading bloc would help to stabilize Europe politically and

U.K. Reply

Saturday Key Day In Talks

LONDON (CP)—Commonwealth criticism of Britain's bid to join the Common Market piled up again Wednesday as Commonwealth prime ministers wound up the first stage of their momentous conference.

Prime Minister Macmillan is expected to deliver Britain's reply Saturday after a cabinet meeting Thursday that will review his government's position.

SIGNIFICANT

Conference sources said Saturday could be a "most significant" day, but there was no indication Macmillan's government will change its determination to press on with negotiations to join Europe.

See stories on Page 3.

An official British source said, however, that the British approach to the Common Market negotiations at Brussels, resuming late this month, "will be influenced by the strong views expressed by Commonwealth leaders at their summit talks here Tuesday and Wednesday."

TRADE TALK

For the next two days, the complex and varied trade interests of the multi-nation Commonwealth will be discussed in detail in four conference committees.

Canada's interest, along with Australia and New Zealand, will centre on a committee dealing with terms that would govern their agricultural exports to the British market when and if Britain makes the final decision to join the European Economic Community.

Wednesday, last of three days of opening statements by Commonwealth leaders, it was the turn of seven newer and smaller member countries.

IMPERIALISM

Their main concern was that the Common Market, even with British membership, might impose a form of "economic imperialism" on them, barring entry to the manufactured goods they hope to produce and export in order to develop from their former colonial status.

Chinese Surround Indian Border Post

NEW DELHI (AP)—Chinese troops have entered northeast India and surrounded an Indian outpost on the lofty, forbidding Himalayan trails used by the Dalai Lama in his escape from the Chinese captors of Tibet, authoritative sources said Wednesday. The Chinese in the last four years have penetrated and withdrawn from the area three times previously.

An informed source said the Indian outpost of 30 Assam riflemen was surrounded Tuesday by 16 times as many Chinese a mile inside territory India has long claimed and occupied. Unconfirmed reports reaching here said the Chinese disarmed the Indians and then marched nine miles farther into Indian territory. There was no indication of any fighting.

Conflicting reports indicated the Chinese might be pushing toward the important Buddhist monastery town of Towang, 15 miles inside Indian territory.

The Dalai Lama now lives in exile at Dharamsala, a north Indian Himalayan resort.

Prices Hit Peak

PARIS (Reuters)—French retail prices have almost doubled in the last 13 years, and the cost of hotel rooms has more than trebled.
